FOREWORD

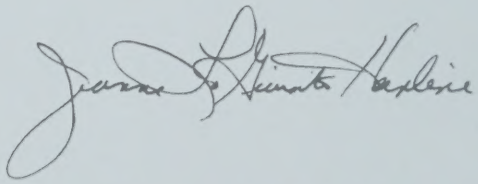
It is with great pleasure and pride that we present the 2013 Edition of The Official Catholic Directory® P.J. Kenedy & Sons. This special Papal Succession Edition, features a tribute to Pope Emeritus Benedict XVI and a heartfelt welcome to Pope Francis. Additionally, feature articles outline the history of the papacy, give insight into the process of electing a pope, evaluate the use of new technology and social media by U.S. Catholics and review the changing times. This edition also honors the College of Cardinals of the Holy Roman Church.

After a lifetime of service to the Catholic Church and his unexpected resignation, Pope Benedict XVI will be remembered first and foremost as a teacher. His contributions to the Church and the world will survive in his writings, religious instruction and his papal letters and documents.



With this volume, we also welcome the new Holy Father, Francis. He is known for his humility, concern for the poor and commitment for dialogue among people of all backgrounds, beliefs and faiths. It is our hope that with his leadership and guidance Pope Francis brings the faithful from around the world even closer to the word of God.

We strive to provide a thorough and accurate portrait of the Catholic Church in America and to continually improve this unique and valuable reference tool. This directory owes a debt of gratitude to the ecclesiastical authorities and diocesan officials who helped make The Official Catholic Directory® P.J. Kenedy & Sons possible. We thank them for their cooperation and invaluable assistance.

Sincerely,

Robert Docherty

The Seal of P.J. Kenedy & Sons
The Official Catholic Directory

Significance

The shield is the central part of a heraldic device, which is more commonly known as a coat of arms. If that shield is enclosed within a body of text, or other type of surrounding configuration, the device becomes known as a seal, yet it is the shield portion of the design that is the most important, and that which is described technically as the blazon. As the design is examined, it must be remembered that by heraldic tradition the design is described (blazoned) as if being done by the bearer with the shield being worn on the arm. Therefore, the terms dexter and sinister will be reversed as the design is viewed from the front.

The shield of the seal for The Official Catholic Directory has been designed to reflect the character and heritage of this publication of P.J. Kenedy & Sons.

The shield is in two major portions. The right half (sinister impalement) is composed of the blue shield on which are seen a silver tree, two candles (in silver or white) in their candleholders (of gold or yellow) and an open book, edged in gold and with a red bookmark. These symbols have been used over the years as the sign of the P.J. Kenedy & Sons publishing organization. These are the traditional symbols of knowledge and learning, so appropriate to a publisher.

The other side of the shield (the dexter impalement) is composed of a silver (white) field on which is seen a red cross, throughout, and a gold eagle. These symbols, combined with the field of the sinister impalement, are represented in the color of the flag of the United States of America and the eagle, the symbol of the United States. The cross represents Christianity and all of this combines to signify that The Official Catholic Directory annually reports on the Catholic Church in the United States.

The shield is surrounded by a laurel wreath of excellence and is enclosed within the legend that states the name of the company, the name of the publication and date (1817) of its founding.

His Eminence Óscar Andrés Cardinal Rodríguez Maradiaga, S.D.B., Caritas Internationalis President and member of Food For The Poor's Board of Directors.

For more than 30 years, our loving donors have served the poorest of the poor in 17 countries across Latin America and the Caribbean. Thanks to the support of missionaries, local clergy, churches, like minded organizations and compassionate individuals, we are able to provide food, housing, healthcare, education, fresh water, micro-enterprise projects and emergency relief to those who need it most.

We are among the largest international relief and development charities in the country, according to The Chronicle of Philanthropy. Since 1982, we have supplied more than $10 billion worth of aid and built more than 84,000 housing units for poor families. Committed to being good stewards of every gift we receive, our fundraising and other administrative costs comprise less than 5% of our expenses; more than 95% of all donations go directly to those in need.

We believe that Christ is alive, and seek to reflect His unconditional love. Our interdenominational Christian ministry links the church of the First World with the church of the Third World by serving the materially poor and poor in spirit. We fulfill vital human and spiritual needs as guided by Matthew 25:40: "As often as you did it to one of the least of My brothers and sisters, you did it to Me."

Design-Driven Innovation

"The design and execution of the lighting for the remodeling of Neumann University's Sacred Heart Chapel was crucial to the success of our vision. The University decided to implement LED technology … and ABHA Architects called on The Rambusch Company to provide the lighting design, which required custom integration of light fixtures with ceiling panels, and custom LED downlights. Rambusch … designed, manufactured and delivered to meet an aggressive construction schedule. When faced with a demanding project, we rely on Rambusch to deliver great design with state-of-the-art products. And we are never disappointed."

Cross Catholic Outreach: A Model of the New Evangelization

By Msgr. Ted Bertagni

As the Church presses onward with the New Evangelization, Cross Catholic Outreach remains at the forefront, exemplifying the practical application of the Holy Father's first encyclical, Deus Caritas Est, to the work of serving the poor. The Florida-based ministry helps the Church faithful practice "love of neighbor, grounded in the love of God," by giving American parishes effective ways of supporting Christ-centered charitable projects in the developing world.

At the Pontifical Council Cor Unum's 2013 plenary assembly, Cor Unum President Cardinal Robert Sarah reiterated the important connection between faith and charity as expressed through the New Evangelization. In pursuit of that ideal, Cardinal Sarah has enthusiastically endorsed Cross Catholic Outreach.

"The relationship between Cor Unum and Cross Catholic makes it possible for the aid to provide a direct and meaningful response to emergency situations and to human and Christian development," says Cardinal Sarah. "We anticipate that even more can be accomplished in the years ahead and so encourage Cross Catholic Outreach to remain a resolute advocate for the poor through parish visits, educational programs and other activities."

Cardinal Robert Sarah visited Cross Catholic Outreach to affirm Cor Unum's ongoing collaboration with the ministry.

© L'Osservatore Romano

Cross Catholic Outreach President Jim Cavnar was greeted by Pope Benedict XVI during Cor Unum's 2013 plenary assembly.

Cross Catholic President Jim Cavnar agrees. "We have been blessed to collaborate with the Pontifical Council Cor Unum. As a group of committed Catholics, we find it inspiring to be part of the Holy Father's own outreach to the poor."

"We have two goals," says Cavnar. "To educate and to involve. Although the work of the Church is alive and vibrant in places like Haiti, the Philippines, China and Africa, many American Catholics are unaware of the scope and impact of these efforts. The goal of our Outreach Priest program is to highlight the impressive mission work being accomplished by Catholic missions overseas. As parishes learn more about the work of the Church abroad, they often want to take a more active role in supporting its outreaches. Cross Catholic helps them accomplish this by having its staff and trained field officers work with them and help them find specific projects they are interested in sponsoring."

Endorsed by over 70 U.S. bishops, Cross Catholic fully embraced the Year of Faith initiatives and has exemplified what the Holy Father directed all charities to do in his recent Motu Proprio. By working directly under the local bishops, Cross Catholic promotes the work of evangelization while being an expression of Christ's love for the poor.

Pope Benedict

A Legacy of Teaching and Reform

BY JOHN L. ALLEN, JR.

Joseph Ratzinger, the man who became Pope Benedict XVI, is famous for taking the long view of things. He would likely be the first to say that assessing the legacy of a papacy immediately after it ends is premature, because one needs the leaving effect of time before a mature judgment can be reached.

With that caution duly noted, perhaps the first draft of history on Benedict's eight-year reign can be stated this way: This was a magnificent teaching pope, whose most memorable teaching act may well have been his last. His stunning decision to become the first pope in seven centuries to voluntarily renounce the office offered a priceless counter-cultural witness, in a world in which those who achieve fame and influence rarely let it go.

If ever proof were needed that power in the Church is supposed to be about service, Benedict XVI seemingly delivered it.

Of course, this teaching pope also faced no shortage of administrative and managerial challenges over a stormy eight years in office. If he leaves behind some unfinished business, he also clearly marked out a pathway toward reform.

A teaching pope

Elected to the papacy on April 19, 2005, Joseph Ratzinger must have asked himself what God's providential logic was in placing a 78-year-old theology professor upon the Throne of Peter. The conclusion he seems to have drawn is that God wanted him to teach, and teach he most certainly did.

For eight years, Benedict XVI led a global graduate seminar on the intersection of reason and faith, and the role of religious communities in a post-modern secular world. The core of his argument was that reason and faith need one another – that reason shorn of faith becomes skepticism and nihilism, while faith divorced from reason becomes extremism and fundamentalism.

Given that premise, Benedict insisted that faith communities are not a threat to the secular ethos of tolerance. They are instead vital to the health of democratic societies, because they supply the bedrock moral principles that democracies cannot generate for themselves. In that sense, he suggested, people of faith can and should be constructive partners in fashioning a better world.

The Spiritual Vision of Pope Francis I

BY RUSSELL SHAW

Someone trying to comprehend the spiritual vision, both revolutionary and traditional, that motivates the complex human being who is Pope Francis would do well to begin by pondering two quotations. One is from "The First Principle and Foundation," the introductory section of the Spiritual Exercises of St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Society of Jesus. The work has been central to the formational experience of every Jesuit since the sixteenth century, including Jorge Bergoglio.

In part, "The First Principle and Foundation" is this: "Man is created to praise, reverence, and serve God our Lord, and by this means to save his soul. The other things on the face of the earth are created for man to help him in attaining the end for which he is created....We must make ourselves indifferent to all created things, as far as we are allowed free choice and are not under any prohibition. Consequently, as far as we are concerned, we should not prefer health to sickness, riches to poverty, honor to dishonor, a long life to a short life."

Pope Francis I addresses the crowd after appearing for the first time on the central balcony of St. Peter's Basilica at the Vatican March 13. Cardinal Jorge Mario Bergoglio of Argentina was elected the 266th Roman Catholic pontiff.

The second quotation is from the homily Francis preached at the Mass he celebrated in the Sistine Chapel with the cardinals who a day earlier had chosen him 266th occupant of the chair of St. Peter and leader of the worldwide Catholic Church. Speaking without a text, he said: "When we walk without the Cross, when we build without the Cross, when we profess a Christ without the Cross...we aren't disciples of the Lord. We are worldly, we are bishops, priests, cardinals, popes, but not disciples of the Lord. I wish that all of us might have the courage to walk in the Lord's presence with the Cross of the Lord."

Single-minded devotion to the will of God whose paradigmatic expression is Jesus' sacrifice on the Cross--here is the spiritual heart of the program of Pope Francis from which the rest follows. Its practical consequences are epitomized in the Jesuit motto Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam--For the Greater Glory of God--and reaffirmed in his own episcopal and papal motto: Miserando atque Eligendo--Having mercy and selecting, a reference to the gospel account of Christ's calling of St. Matthew and, by implication, to Matthew's unhesitating yes.

Pope Francis is a pope of firsts: the first pope from the Southern Hemisphere, where Christianity has expanded dramatically in recent decades, first Jesuit pope, first non-European pope in nearly 1,300 years, quite possibly the first pope who as archbishop of a major archdiocese regularly rode the subway to work and cooked his own meals.

And the first to take the name Francis.

Why Francis? In choosing a name, a pope means to say something about himself and his hopes for his pontificate. Pope Francis is no exception. Meeting with nearly 6,000 media people following the conclave, he recalled that at the crucial moment when it became clear that he would be chosen, the cardinal seated next to him--retired Cardinal Claudio Hummes of Brazil--hugged him and said, "Do not forget the poor." Then, the Holy Father added: "That word entered here--the poor, the poor. Then I thought of the wars…And in this way the name came, in my heart: Francis of Assisi. He is for me the man of poverty, the man of peace, the man who loves and cares for creation….Ah, how I would like a Church that is poor and for the poor."

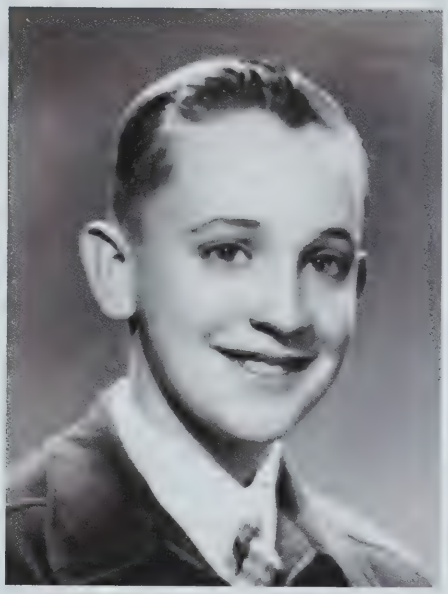
Together with much else, the elevation to the papacy of Cardinal Jorge Bergoglio of Buenos Aires, Argentina, calls dramatic attention to an epochal southward shift in the center of gravity of world Catholicism occurring over the last half-century--a movement from Europe and the developed nations of the North to Latin America, Africa, and Asia. Some 700 million of the world's 1.2 billion Catholics now live in countries of the global South, including 450 million in Latin America.

The election also has brought to the papacy a man who in lifestyle as well as preaching and ministry exemplifies personal asceticism and service in Christ's name to the poor, the marginalized , and the oppressed. His approach to high office is unpretentious, direct, and decisive, with a flair for dramatic gestures expressing his commitment to radical Christianity. "Let us never forget," he said in his homily at his March 19 inaugural Mass, "that authentic power is service, and that the pope, too, when exercising service, must enter ever more fully into that service which has its radiant culmination on the Cross."

Coming on the heels of Pope Benedict XVI's resignation, which took the world by surprise, Francis' election March 13 on the conclave's first full day and fifth ballot was hardly less surprising. Clearly, though, it should not have been, since it had been widely reported that he came close to being elected in the conclave of 2005 that chose Pope Benedict. His age, 76, was thought to be against him this time, but clearly the cardinals thought differently.

Argentine Cardinal Jorge Mario Bergoglio washes the feet of residents of a shelter for drug users during Holy Thursday Mass in 2008 at a church in a poor neighborhood of Buenos Aires, Argentina. The 76-year-old Jesuit became the first Latin American pope March 13, taking the name Francis.

Jorge Mario Bergoglio was born in a working-class neighborhood of Buenos Aires on December 17, 1936, one of five children of Mario Jose and Regina Maria Bergoglio. His father was an accountant for a railway from near Turin who left Italy out of disgust with the fascist regime there. His mother was the daughter of Italian immigrants.



As a young man, he underwent the removal of part of his right lung due to an infection. At the age of 17, he had something like a mystical experience, described as a special sense of "the loving presence of God in his life." In time, it led him to the priesthood and religious life. Although he had planned on a career in chemistry, in 1958 he joined the Society of Jesus and began the long Jesuit formational program. He studied in Chile and Argentina, taught in Jesuit schools from 1964 to 1966, was ordained a priest on December 13, 1969, and pronounced perpetual vows on April 22, 1973. After serving as a master of novices, on July 31, 1973--the feast day of St. Ignatius--he was chosen provincial (regional superior) of the Argentine Jesuits, a position he held until 1979.

"That word entered here--the poor, the poor. Then I thought of the wars…And in this way the name came, in my heart: Francis of Assisi. He is for me the man of poverty, the man of peace, the man who loves and cares for creation….Ah, how I would like a Church that is poor and for the poor."

Argentina in those years was ruled by a military dictatorship busy waging a "dirty war" against leftists in which as many as 30,000 Argentinians died, many of them clandestinely executed. The Catholic Church in Argentina was split between those who supported the regime and those opposed it. Argentine Jesuits under Father Bergoglio were similarly divided over the pros and cons of left-leaning liberation theology.

The conflicts of those years were reflected after Francis' election in the re-emergence of old complaints that he had failed to protect two Jesuits working in the Buenos Aires slums who were arrested, tortured, and imprisoned for five months. But one of them, still living, said the provincial was not to blame for what happened, while according to his biographer he worked behind the scenes to obtain the men's release. He also helped others hide from the regime and in one instance gave a man his own papers so he could flee the country. Says Adolfo Perez Esquivel, Argentine human rights activist and winner of the 1980 Nobel Peace Prize, "there were bishops that were complicit with the dictatorship, but Bergoglio, no."

After his term as provincial, he was a seminary rector until 1986. He then spent several months in Frankfurt, Germany, working on his doctoral dissertation in theology, a study of the prominent pre-Vatican II theologian Romano Guardini. Returning to Argentina, he was a confessor and spiritual director. During these years he also published several books, including two that were based on the Spiritual Exercises of St. Ignatius. In 1992 Pope John Paul II appointed him Auxiliary to Cardinal Antonio Quarracino of Buenos Aires. He was consecrated June 27. Five years later, he was named Coadjutor Archbishop, becoming Archbishop of Buenos Aires upon Cardinal Quarracino's death on February 28, 1998. He also served as Ordinary for Eastern Catholics in Argentina who were without a bishop of their own.

Pope John Paul raised him to cardinal at the consistory of February 21, 2001, and he was given the titular Roman church of St. Robert Bellarmine, named for an eminent Jesuit theologian of the 16th and early 17th centuries. He served as a member of five dicasteries of the Roman Curia--the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments, the Congregation for the Clergy, the Congregation for Institutes of Consecrated Life and Societies of Apostolic Life, the Pontifical Council for the Family, and the Commission for Latin America.

In 2005 the bishops of Argentina elected him president of the Argentine Episcopal Conference. He was elected to a second three-year term in 2008. He played an active role in the fifth general conference of the bishops of Latin America and the Caribbean, held in Aparecida, Brazil in May 2007, and helped write its much praised concluding statement. It declares the Church to be in "permanent mission," expresses the bishops' renewed commitment to evangelization, and says Jesus calls all members of the Church to do their part ("May no one stay with crossed arms!").

As Archbishop of Buenos Aires, he was in charge of one of the major archdioceses of the world, with a Catholic population of more than 2.5 million. Living in a small apartment in preference to the elegant diocesan bishop's residence, preparing his own meals, and riding public transportation, he became famous for his simple manner of life and concern for the poor. He also cultivated friendly relations with non-Catholic churches and religious bodies. His one known personal indulgence was being an avid fan of a local soccer team. Typically, unaccompanied by a secretary, he flew coach class to Rome for the conclave that was to elect him pope.

A few months before, in a pastoral letter launching the Church's worldwide Year of Faith in Buenos Aires, he said "crossing the threshold of faith" means "drawing near to everyone who lives a marginalized existence and calling him by name…caring for the frailties of the weakest and supporting their tottering steps, certain that whatever we do for the least of our brethren we do for Jesus himself." Devotion to the poor is more than just a matter of words for him. As archbishop, he worshiped with them, ministered to them, and consoled them.

Pope Francis is strongly prolife ("abortion is never a solution," he has said) and a defender of traditional marriage and family life. His positions on public issues have often brought him into conflict with secular authorities, including the late Argentine President Nestor Kirchner and his widow and successor, President Cristina Fernandez de Kirchner, who is said to have repeatedly refused to meet with him. After his election as pope, however, she was the first head of state to receive an audience. Says a Catholic professor at a non-Catholic university in the United States whose wife is an Argentine native and who has visited there many times, "the government…did not like him at all, and it is somewhat humorous that they have reversed course and are now telling their followers to support the new Pope."

The Aparecida Document, when speaking of Catholic officeholders and physicians who support abortion, endorsed what it called "Eucharistic coherence." It explained: "People cannot receive holy communion and at the same time act or speak against the commandments, in particular when abortion, euthanasia, and other serious crimes against life and family are facilitated." This principle applies in particular to "legislators, governors, and health professionals," it added.

Relations between Cardinal Bergoglio and the regime became particularly tense over the issue of same-sex marriage, which he strongly opposed and the government supported. "At stake is the identity and survival of the family: father, mother, and children. At stake are the lives of many children who will be…deprived of their human development given by a father and mother and willed by God. At stake is the total rejection of God's law engraved in our hearts," he said. But he is not merely a hardliner, as he showed in rebuking priests who refused to baptize the children of unmarried mothers.

One of his early priorities as pope most likely will be a reform of the Roman Curia, a target of much criticism in recent years. Besides personnel changes, this may involve more participation by the world's bishops in the central government of the Church in line with the principle of collegiality enunciated by Vatican Council II. A reform of religious life also seems possible, including reforms in the Society of Jesus, some of whose members are, in the words of a prominent Jesuit, part of the "recalcitrant sectors" of the Church. Other new initiatives seem probable. As these emerge, his commitment to traditional faith and morality almost certainly will bring him into conflict with the secular Zeitgeist and make him a target of criticism by some who praised him at the start.

Pope Francis seems to anticipate as much. In an address to the diplomatic corps accredited to the Holy See, he referred again to his choice of the name Francis and to the saint of Assisi's love for the poor. Then he said: "But there is another form of poverty. It is the spiritual poverty of our time, which afflicts the so-called richer countries particularly seriously. It is what my much-beloved predecessor Benedict XVI called the 'tyranny of relativism,' which makes everyone his own criterion and endangers the coexistence of peoples....Fighting poverty, both material and spiritual, building peace, and constructing bridges: these, as it were, are the reference points for a journey that I want to invite each of the countries here represented to take up."

"crossing the threshold of faith … drawing near to everyone who lives a marginalized existence and calling him by name … caring for the frailties of the weakest and supporting their tottering steps, certain that whatever we do for the least of our brethren we do for Jesus himself."

In his mind, this is to be the journey of his pontificate--a pilgrimage he invites everyone to make with him. At its deepest level, its moving force can be found in a famous Ignatian prayer in the Spiritual Exercises: "Take, Lord, and receive all my liberty, my memory, my understanding, and my entire will, all that I have and possess. Thou hast given all to me. To Thee, O Lord, I return it. Dispose of it wholly according to Thy will. Give me Thy love and Thy grace, for this is sufficient for me."

RESTORING THE PAST

New gathering space, custom millwork.

Existing marble reredos to be installed at Holy Name of Jesus as shown in rendering.

COMPLETE CHURCH RENOVATION, Summer 2013:
Holy Name of Jesus Parish, Brooklyn, NY, Reverend James Cunningham, Pastor
Upgraded liturgical furnishings and appointments. • Stenciling on sanctuary walls, under arches and side altars. • Relocate tabernacle • Repair walls and repaint church • Install air conditioning system & upgrade lighting & electrical systems • Install new marble altar, & ambo • Wood ceiling and columns to become design highlights • Marble flooring sanctuary/nave • New pews

Plans call for a more traditional ornate marble altar, that once adorned St. Vincent de Paul Church in Williamsburg, to be installed at Holy Name. Originally designed by famed architect James Renwick Jr., as a side altar for St. Patrick's Cathedral, Manhattan, it proved to be too large and was set up instead in Brooklyn's St. Vincent de Paul Church.

Also to be included will be the two side altars from St. Vincent de Paul as well as the baptismal font. The pieces have been stored in a diocesan warehouse in Bushwick since the closing of St. Vincent de Paul church two years ago.

From Peter to Francis:

A Brief Papal History

THOMAS F. X. NOBLE, UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME

Popes have been saints and sinners, warriors and peacemakers, gifted administrators and bumblers, skilled diplomats and utter innocents. They span the human spectrum.

The papacy is the world's oldest continuously functioning institution. A history of the papacy necessarily involves three interrelated themes: The serial biography of 266 popes; the history of an idea—the "Petrine Idea"; and the ever-changing history of an institution. Popes have been saints and sinners, warriors and peacemakers, gifted administrators and bumblers, skilled diplomats and utter innocents. They span the human spectrum.

Until the fourth century we cannot say much about individual popes. From the beginning, things are mysterious. The New Testament tells us a good deal about St. Peter and makes his prominence very clear. Yet we have not a scrap of contemporary evidence about his time as bishop of Rome. Beginning in the second century a rich and diverse set of traditions about Peter arose but nothing gives us a sense of the man himself.

Beginning with Damasus (366-84), the "ladies ear tickler,"—so called because of his ability to secure pious benefactions—some popes begin to emerge as recognizable personalities. Leo I (440-61) was thoughtful and resolute amid controversies about the pope's authority and the relationship between the divine and human natures of Jesus. Gregory I (590-604) was ascetic, pious, and learned. Nicholas I (858-67) had a loftier sense of the papal dignity than any of his predecessors. Gregory VII (1073-85) struggled mightily with the German Empire over appointments to ecclesiastical offices. Innocent III (1198-1216) could write about the miseries of this world but employed his lawyer's mind to manage the church and discipline secular rulers as no pope before him. In the dawning Renaissance, Martin V (1417-31) worried about "the literature of the damned." But his successors brought the Renaissance to Rome, patronized artists, built the Sistine Chapel, and founded the Vatican Library. One of them, Pius II (1458-64) achieved great renown as a scholar before giving up a dissolute life to be a noble pope. Alexander VI (1492-1503) fathered eight or nine children and squandered papal resources on his colorful children. His successor Julius II (1503-13), "ilTerribile," was more often seen in full armor and on horseback than wearing papal vestments. The resourceful Paul III (1534-49) launched the Council of Trent. Paul V (1605-21), whose name can be seen to this day in letters ten feet tall on the façade of St. Peter's, was a distinguished diplomat who appears enlightened in permitting the vernacular in worship in China but benighted in censuring Copernicus and Galileo. Urban VIII (1623-44) was a fine poet, but he too condemned Galileo and emptied he papal treasury in ill-considered wars, prompting a wag to say "What the barbarians did not do the Barberini did." Benedict XIV (1740-58) promoted the work of scholars and artists—Voltaire dedicated a book to him—but he had the common touch and walked freely about Rome speaking with ordinary people in their dialect. Pius IX (1846-78), an immensely complicated figure, ruled longer than any pope in history. Early in his reign he instituted enlightened reforms in the church, in Rome, and in the Papal States, and he improved relations with Rome's Jews. As time wore on he angrily lashed out against virtually all the economic, social, and political movements of his time. Pius X (1903-14) was a good and gentle pastor and the "pope of frequent holy communion." But he also condemned "Modernism" and put the church on the defensive. Rumor has it he was never seen to smile. Quiet and reflective, Pius XII (1939-58) was immensely popular in his own time but became controversial in the 1960s when he was accused of doing too little to save European Jews during the Holocaust. John XXIII (1958-63) was and remains a lovable figure. Dynamic, charismatic, polyglot, and world traveler, John Paul II (1978-2005) re-made the papacy in the media age. Seemingly austere and remote, except to those who know him well, Benedict XVI (2005-13) was a superb theologian but will forever remembered for resigning the papal office, the first pope to do so since 1415. It is too early to take the measure of Pope Francis but comparisons with John XXIII are pouring in. Conclaves have, thus, given the church a dazzling array of talents, personalities, and perspectives.

A fresco by Giotto depicts Pope Innocent III's (1198-1216) approval of St. Francis and his followers during their visit to Rome in 1209-1210. Innocent III could write about the miseries of this world but employed his lawyer's mind to manage the church and discipline secular rulers as no pope before him.

Each pope is the successor of St. Peter; technically, Francis did not succeed Benedict XVI, but Peter himself. The pope therefore holds the Petrine office. The source for this office is found in Mt. 16.16-19 where Christ said to Peter "For you are Peter and on this rock I will build my church." The meaning and implications of that office have changed considerably over the centuries. Stephen I (254-57) was the first pope to insist that he held the cathedra Petri, the "chair of Peter." The Council of Serdica (343) permitted appeals to go to Rome and Innocent I (401-17) claimed the right to intervene in the first place in contested issues. Siricius (384-99) issued the first decretal. In responding in 385 to some questions from a Spanish bishop Siricius laid down rules of universal application. The Emperor Theodosius I (379-95) legislated that all Christians were to believe as the bishop of Rome believed because he was the successor of Peter. The Councils of Constantinople I (381) and Chalcedon (451) said that the patriarch of Constantinople ranked second after the bishop of Rome. These developments prompted Leo I to reflect deeply on the Petrine office. He asserted that the bishop of Rome did not owe his position to the prominence of Rome itself, to imperial decrees, or to conciliar decisions. Instead, the bishop of Rome, as the vicar of Peter, held the "plenitude of power" precisely because of Christ's words to Peter in Matthew's Gospel. It took centuries for the implications of plenitudopotestatis to be worked out in practical detail.

In the twelfth and thirteenth centuries the popes built up a set of institutions (see below) that gave them the ability to enforce their will over the church at large. The development of canon law played a key role in the articulation of papal power. Decretists, those who commented on Gratian's Decretum (ca. 1140)—the first systematic collection of canon law–and decretalists, those who commented on papal decretals issued after Gratian, spelled out a monarchical position for the pope within the church and within Western society generally. The fourteenth and fifteenth centuries saw diverging trends. While some canonists and theologians were approaching the concept of papal infallibility, others, because of the papacy's residence in Avignon (1309-78) and the Great Schism (1378-1417), spelled out a "conciliarist" ideology that, taken mildly, made popes and councils co-rulers of the church but that, taken strongly, made councils superior to the papacy. For the next several centuries popes were reluctant to call councils for fear that such bodies would challenge papal prerogatives and writers gradually elaborated a defense of the idea of papal infallibilty. The topic became controversial in the middle of the nineteenth century and to achieve clarity Pius IX, in the decree Pastor Aeternus of the First Vatican Council (1870), pronounced that when the pope speaks ex cathedra on matters of faith and morals his utterances are infallible, or, as sometimes stated, "irreformable." Apart from the formal institution of the doctrine, it has been invoked only once, when Pius XII declared the Assumption of Mary to be an article of faith for all Catholics. Theologians who specialize in ecclesiology often argue that infallibility has been implicit in the tradition from the very beginning while historians tend to see the doctrine as the product of historical circumstances and, thus, subject to further reflection in the future.

Before the fourth century it is very difficult to catch a glimpse of the papal government in action. Between about 400 and 800, however, an elaborate set of institutions arose to conduct the work of the local Roman Church. It must always be remembered that, however "universal" his office may be, the pope is always the bishop of Rome and has, in his diocese, the same kinds of duties and responsibilities as any other bishop. Once Constantine I granted Christianity legal status in the Roman Empire (313) the church could function openly as a licit and public institution. When Roman imperial rule in the West collapsed, after 476, the bishops of Rome assumed a wide array of formerly secular and public responsibilities. Consequently, the early papal government had both ecclesiastical and secular dimensions.

In ancient cities the bishop had responsibility for teaching and preaching, recruiting and training clergy, celebrating liturgy, and baptism. In larger cities, as the Christian community grew, the bishop had to delegate some of his responsibilities. In Rome a complex set of administrative and liturgical arrangements carried out the church's work and gave visible expression to the idea that the local church was the bishop's church. Worship in the Roman Church centered on five "patriarchal" basilicas (S. John Lateran, St. Peter's, St. Mary Major, St. Paul-outside the Walls, and St. Lawrence-outside-the-Walls; and on (finally) twenty-eight title churches. On more than 100 occasions each year the pope processed from the Lateran to another of Rome's main churches where he celebrated a "stational" mass. In the pope's absence one of the seven "suburbicarian" bishops could celebrate at St. John Lateran. The twenty-eight title priests could celebrate in one of the other four patriarchal basilicas. This elaborate, rotating system—elements of which survive today—expressed the principle that the Sancta Romana Ecclesia was the pope's church. The suburbicarian bishops and title priests were, certainly from the fifth century, cardinals; cardo means "hinge" or "pivot," so the cardinals were the "pivotal" figures; but because cardinal clergy had the responsibility of officiating in other churches than their own, they were said to be "incardinated."

Alongside this liturgical apparatus, the Roman Church developed administrative structures to handle duties that were partly ecclesial and partly secular. Rome was divided, perhaps as early as Fabian (236-50), into seven regions. In each region the pope appointed a deacon to oversee charitable services and a notary to keep records. The seven "regionary" deacons became the cardinal deacons of the church. Financial officials emerged to collect and dispense revenues derived from the patrimonies—lands owned outright by the church—and from pious benefactions. There were other officers too, for instance the Nomenclator, who was basically the chief protocol officer. By 800 there were twenty-two diaconiae from which, on Fridays, food was distributed to the people—a task formerly performed by the Roman state.

In the time of Urban II (1088-99) the term curia first appeared as a short-hand for the whole papal government. In the twelfth and thirteenth centuries the papal government grew as never before, or since. The popes began holding Lateran Councils (e.g. 1123, 1139, 1179, 1215) which gathered the bishops and abbots from all of Europe and which legislated for the whole church. The Fourth Lateran Council (1215) was the largest and most important council between antiquity and Trent (1545-63). The popes began regularly dispatching legates to investigate particular issues and appointing legates more or less permanently at major royal courts. In the curia itself, the cardinals—potentially 53 or 54, but usually fewer than that—sat in Consistory with the pope as a kind of "senate" of the church. The papal courts, chiefly the paenetentiaria and the rota Romana, both of which still exist, brought more and more legal business under papal jurisdiction. Simultaneously the financial offices of the church expanded their scope and competence. Through the systems of expectancies and papal provisions the popes took more control over the appointment of bishops everywhere. The papacy took charge of the canonization of saints. The Crusades were seen as a papal enterprise. The disciplinary tools of excommunication, interdict, and inquisition were refined and applied more broadly. As noted above, the church's legal system exploded in this period and enhanced papal power. In the twelfth century the pope began to be called Vicar of Christ instead of Vicar of Peter. This vast institutional edifice, by far the most sophisticated in Europe, gave the popes the means to make good on the old Petrine claims. The popes not only claimed power, they exercised it.

Importantly, the church several times legislated on how popes were to be chosen. Prior to 769 popes were elected "by clergy and people" in frequently tumultuous elections. In that year elections, and the electable, were restricted to the Roman clergy and to the cardinal clergy, respectively. In 1059 the cardinal bishops seized the upper hand but, after much controversy, a decree of 1179 opened the process once again to all cardinals and required a two-thirds majority for election. Between 1241 and 1268 the basic rules of the conclave were set down. From the late fifteenth century conclaves have been held in the Sistine Chapel. Gregory XV (1621-23) instituted some electoral reforms that persisted until the twentieth century. He required secret ballots and eliminated non-electoral processes like acclamation and adoration. Rumor and scandal often attended papal elections and in 1903 Pius X demanded utter secrecy. With some modest refinements by Paul VI and John Paul II the electoral system that emerged in the Middle Ages continues in our time.

This medieval system persisted with modest modifications through the Avignon period, the Great Schism, the Renaissance and the Reformation. After the Council of Trent the modern system of Congregations gradually took shape. Congregations, sometimes called Dicastries, are the branches or departments of the papal government. Their specific number and competence have changed over the years. Today there are nine: Doctrine of the Faith, Oriental Churches, Divine Worship, Causes of Saints, Evangelization of Peoples, Clergy, Institutes of Consecrated Life, Catholic Education, and Bishops. Each is headed by a cardinal prefect and populated by other cardinals, clerics, and experts. The secretary of state, always a cardinal appointed by the pope, is the Vatican's highest official after the pope. This office came into its own in the eighteenth century.

The history of the papacy may be thought of in terms of challenge and response. Perhaps half the popes in the first three centuries were martyrs but they maintained the church. After Constantine I relations with the Roman Empire were complex. Imperial benefactions—tax breaks, clerical exemptions from military service, material donations—were welcome but emperors also believed that they could intervene in doctrinal quarrels. Those quarrels themselves were serious challenges. In the fourth century the quarrel was Trinitarian as the popes tried to counter Arianism which subordinated the Son to the Father, and in the fifth century the quarrel was Christological, as the popes tried to counter Miaphysitism which stressed the divine nature of Christ at the expense of the human. For the Latin and Greek churches, the popes prevailed but in so doing they lost the Coptic, Syriac, and Nestorian churches. After the Western empire vanished the popes faced, immediately, two challenges. First, the rapid and unexpected eruption of Islam in the Mediterranean basin cost the popes the ancient church in North Africa and cut them off from the Christian Churches of the East. Second, the steady emergence of differences between the Roman and Greek Churches, which culminated in the Schism of 1054, stripped the popes of any effective influence in the lands that became Orthodox. At the same time, the popes faced barbarian threats in Italy from the Lombards. The emperors in Constantinople neither could nor would provide any help and the popes turned to the Franks. Stephen II (752-57) achieved a promise of protection and got title, through the so-called "Donation of Pippin," to the Italian lands that the Lombards had conquered from the Byzantines. This represents the origin of the Papal States. Continued threats in Italy and factionalism within the Roman aristocracy put the popes in a position where they needed some European power to protect them. One power after another was called into service but by the time of Innocent III the popes concluded that only by shoring up the Papal States and relying on them could they secure independence. From Innocent to Pius IX the popes struggled to maintain the Papal States and their long effort to do so helps to explain why Pius so resolutely opposed the Risorgimento, the movement for Italian unification. Pius became the "prisoner of the Vatican" and refused to deal with the new Italian state. Only in 1929 did Pius XI sign the Lateran Accords with Benito Mussolini which confined the papacy to, but guaranteed its possession of, Vatican City. Francis rules over 108 acres whereas his predecessors had for centuries controlled about one-third of Italy.

Political, military, and diplomatic challenges were not the only ones the popes faced. If the early medieval period witnessed a diminution of the territorial shape of the pope's remit, the situation was reversed beginning in the high Middle Ages. Hungary, large parts of the Slavic world, and Scandinavia were brought into the fold. Later, European exploration and discovery brought much of the globe under papal auspices. The Catholic Church has deep European roots but is today the world's most authentically international institution. John Paul II canonized more saints than all his predecessors put together and a majority of them were from Africa and Asia. The cardinals have just elected a pope from Latin America.

Dogmatic challenges faced the popes in antiquity and recurred in later centuries. Just as Arians and Miaphysites were overcome, so too were, for the most part, Albigensians, Waldensians, Wycliffites, and Hussites. The Protestant rupture in the sixteenth century has not yet been healed.

The age of the scientific revolution and the enlightenment brought new challenges. Science and reason seemed to many to offer better explanations of basic human concerns and the natural world than tradition and faith. The French Revolution and the rise of mass democracies in the nineteenth century put an end to most of the Catholic monarchies with which the papacy had dealt for centuries. Explicitly atheist political ideologies shattered long-standing ideas about statecraft. Popes navigated these treacherous waters with mixed results. The popes could not retain church control of education, could not prevent secular marriage and divorce, and could not move dictators.

Recent decades have seen still more challenges: The legacy of Vatican II and the thorny matter of how to interpret the council; the advent of the 24/7 news cycle and its impact on a traditionally secretive institution; the sexual abuse scandal; allegations of financial irregularities in the Vatican Bank and administrative mismanagement in the curia; and the task of bringing the lapsed back among the faithful.

If things seem difficult at the moment it is important to remember that the Church, and the popes, have always faced challenges and have almost always found the talent and resources to meet them.

Counting U.S. Catholics:
Signs of Stability, Signs of Concern

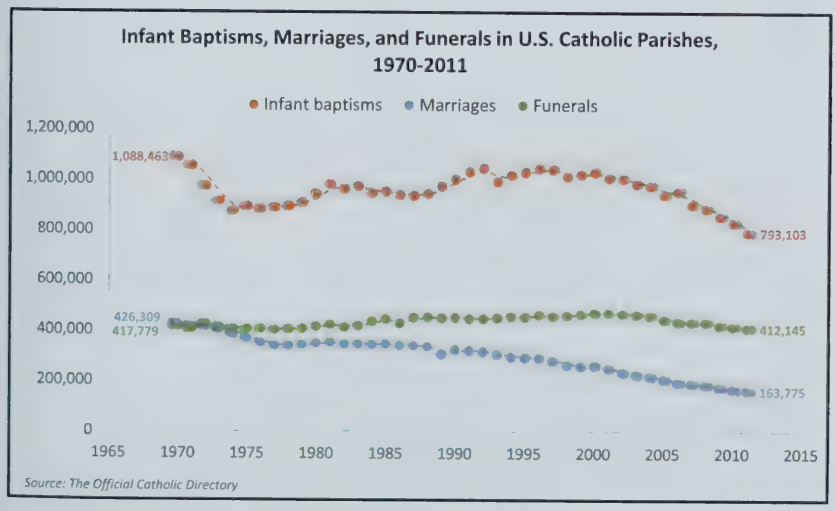
MARK M. GRAY, PH.D., SENIOR RESEARCH ASSOCIATE
CENTER FOR APPLIED RESEARCH IN THE APOSTOLATE



At the moment the world learned of the first pope from the Americas, the Catholic Church in the United States was home to just 6 percent of the world's Catholics, 10 percent of its priests, and 8 percent of its parishes. Some have speculated that Pope Francis may adopt a special interest in the Church in the Western Hemisphere given the history of his election. When he does look to the United States he will see that some of the major indicators for the health of the faith appear to show stability yet there may be some signs of distress as well that could be cause for concern.

Some have speculated that Pope Francis may adopt a special interest in the Church in the Western Hemisphere … he will see that some of the major indicators for the health of the faith appear to show stability yet there may be some signs of distress as well …

Catholic Population Trends

It is true that Catholicism, like all religious affiliations, does not retain all of those raised in the faith—only about 65 percent of them according to the 2012 General Social Survey (GSS). However, that does not mean that the overall number of Americans self-identifying as Catholic is declining. In fact, the Catholic retention rate is higher than that of any single Protestant denomination and the total population of self-identified Catholics in the United States exceeds 75 million. It is expected to climb to nearly 100 million by the middle of this century. By comparison, there were just fewer than 46 million Catholics in the United States in 1970. As shown below, the number of infant baptisms and funerals in U.S. Catholic parishes have remained fairly steady since this time. The number of Baptisms fluctuates with the overall birthrate, which has declined in recent years in reaction to the economic recession. Marriages, however, have been in a steep decline since the mid-1970s.

In 1970 there were about a million infant baptisms each year, more than 400,000 Catholic marriages, and an equal number of Catholic funerals. This represented a sacramental life-cycle balance that indicated vitality and growth. Yet by 2011 the number of infant baptisms fell below 800,000 and the number of Catholic marriages dropped below 164,000 (Note that these figures include only those 195 dioceses or eparchies who belong to the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops).

Many aspects of these changes are difficult to see or have yet to surface in the total numbers of Catholics who self-identify as Catholic in surveys. The green markers and line in the figure below display the average of three of the highest quality long-term series of surveys that we have to study religious change over time including Gallup, the GSS, and the American National Election Study. Year to year changes and differences between these surveys have generally always been within margins of error. In 1970, 23 percent of U.S. adults self-identified as Catholic. An identical percentage affiliated as such in 2011. Yet the other three lines in the figure show declines that are expected to draw down that aggregate Catholic affiliation percentage and the total size of the Catholic population in the next decade, if current trends continue.

Trends in Marriages, Baptisms, and Funerals

One's affiliation with a faith is a state of mind that is subject to fluctuation. Some who leave the faith for a time later return to it. Parish Surveys conducted by the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate (CARA) indicate about 11 percent of Catholics in pews during Mass have left the Church at some point of their life before "reverting" back. But sacramental practice requires action. It is behavioral. Amidst the stability we see in surveys for affiliation or even in Mass attendance rates, which have been unchanged in the last decade, the behavioral data indicate that Catholics are doing fewer Catholic things. In 1970, the number of infant baptisms in the Church was equivalent to 29 percent of all live births in the United States. In 2011, this had fallen to 20 percent. Church marriages in 1970 made up 20 percent of all marriages celebrated in the United States. By 2011 this had fallen to just 8 percent. The number of Catholic funerals celebrated in the Church in 1970 were equivalent to 22 percent of all deaths in the country that year. This measured only 16 percent in 2011.

Catholics are no less likely than non-Catholics in the United States to have children, marry, or die. Thus these figures indicate many Catholics may be choosing not to baptize children, not to marry in the Church, or not to arrange for a Catholic funeral. These data are real signs of trouble. They aren't survey responses; instead, they are based on Church and government figures that are considered trustworthy. The share of baptisms, marriages, and funerals are all falling below what one would expect given the size of the self-identified Catholic population in the United States. These data indicate that 87 percent of Catholic births result in an infant baptism, 71 percent of Catholic deaths result in a church funeral, and only 34 percent of marriages involving a Catholic spouse are celebrated in a Catholic parish.

The trends in Catholic baptisms and marriages in the United States are not unlike what Pope Francis would have witnessed in Argentina as a cardinal. Yet, in Argentina there are significantly fewer priests and parishes per Catholic than in the United States and arranging for sacraments is often more challenging. In fact the culture around sacramental life in parts of Latin America often differs from what it is in the United States. A weekly obligation to attend Mass is only in effect where this is possible. It is the case that a growing number of Catholics in the United States were either born in Latin America or are of Latin American ancestry. Could this be one of the factors affecting sacramental practice in the United States?

Hispanic Catholics

CARA's national surveys indicate that 48 percent of adult Millennial Generation Catholics (those born 1982 or later) self-identify their race or ethnicity as Hispanic or Latino. By comparison, among the oldest Catholics of the Pre-Vatican II Generation (those born 1942 or earlier) only 11 percent self-identify as Hispanic or Latino. The number of U.S. adult Catholics who were either foreign-born or native-born children of at least one foreign-born parent grew from 13.9 million in 1980 to 20.6 million in 2011. This represents a 48 percent growth rate. The adult Catholic population born in the United States to native-born parents grew by 24 percent from 1980 to 2011 (from 27.4 million to 34.1 million). In 2011, about a quarter of all adult Catholics (24 percent) were foreign-born, representing 13.1 million individuals. Adult Catholics who were born in the United States to native-born parents continue to make up the majority of adult Catholics (62 percent) although their share of the population is expected to decline slightly in the near future, even as their aggregate numbers grow—albeit more slowly than the overall Catholic population.

At the same time, data from the last five years indicates that growth in the Hispanic Catholic population may have slowed. In CARA's national surveys, the Hispanic or Latino percentage of the Catholic population peaked at 35 percent before the recession. It has consistently measured 32 percent in CARA polls since this time.

Perhaps more problematic for the Church, many Hispanic Catholics in the United States are also relatively disconnected from parish

Catholic New Media in the United States

MARK M. GRAY, PH.D., SENIOR RESEARCH ASSOCIATE
CENTER FOR APPLIED RESEARCH IN THE APOSTOLATE

Across nine different language Twitter feeds, Pope Francis had more than 4.5 million followers globally reading his tweets just 14 days into his papacy.

Although the election of Pope Francis represented numerous papal "firsts," such as the first Jesuit pope and the first from Latin America, it is noteworthy that Pope Francis could only be the second on Twitter. Following his election, Pope Francis quickly adopted the papal Twitter account (@Pontifex) that was initiated by his predecessor in 2012. When Pope Benedict XVI resigned, the English language Twitter feed had more than 1.6 million followers. Two weeks into Francis' papacy the account had gained nearly 600,000 new followers reaching 2.2 million. Across nine different language Twitter feeds, Pope Francis had more than 4.5 million followers globally reading his tweets just 14 days into his papacy.

It is remarkable to think that when Pope Benedict XVI was elected Twitter did not exist and Facebook and YouTube were in their first year of existence. Twenty-first century media are changing rapidly and Pope Francis' decision to continue to utilize Twitter is one of many indicators that the nearly 2,000 year old Catholic Church is working to keep pace with emerging digital realities. In the last decade Catholics in the United States have developed a significant presence online from popular websites, Facebook pages, widely-followed blogs, Twitter accounts, and an array of videos posted on YouTube.

Cardinal Timothy Dolan of New York, president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB) recently created his own website (cardinaldolan.org) consolidating his existing blog, podcasts, and links to his social network sites into one hub. He has been among the most active Church leaders online in recent years with more than 29,000 likes on his Facebook page and about 116,000 followers on Twitter. Three of the other American voting cardinals accompanying him at the 2013 Conclave are also on Twitter and many other American bishops are embracing the more personalized digital media options beyond their traditional diocesan websites.

Left: Bishop Ronald P. Herzog of Alexandria, La., talks about social media and the church during the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops annual fall meeting in Baltimore Nov. 15, 2010.

Right: Rob DeFrancesco, editor of The Catholic Sun in Phoenix, "tweets" during the keynote address at the Catholic Media Convention in Anaheim, Calif., May 28, 2009. The address was given by Jack Dorsey co-founder of Twitter, the popular online social communication tool.

The Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate (CARA) collaborated with the USCCB last fall to explore this emerging phenomenon in a session at the bishops' General Assembly entitled, "Bishops and Bloggers." Many of the bishops attending expressed their existing enthusiasm or new interest in using Twitter, Facebook, or blogging but some also expressed concerns. Historically, communications between clergy and the faithful have been mostly in one direction—from the pulpit or perhaps in a column in their diocesan newspaper out to the masses. Social media allows for the faithful to respond in a way that becomes digitally archived and searchable. Some wondered about how bishops should navigate the etiquette of these newer two-way forms of communication. How rapidly would they be expected to respond to comments or questions? How informal or personal should they be? Do Catholics want to know what they are ordering at Starbucks or that they are feeling under the weather today?

Bishops are not alone in their interest in using social media for evangelization. Many priests have adopted these technologies as well. For example, Father Robert Barron can be seen on television or online in his own ten-part documentary about the faith, entitled "Catholicsm." He frequently posts on YouTube and can be followed on blogs, Facebook, and Twitter. Similarly, Father Jim Martin, S.J. is a widely followed figure on Twitter and Facebook and writes an award winning blog for America Magazine. He can be seen in numerous YouTube videos and has gained a following among many young Catholics after appearances on Comedy Central's "The Colbert Report."

In many cases Catholics also now have the opportunity to connect online with their local priest. Generally, pastors and other parish ministry leaders have taken to new media a bit more quickly than many bishops and cardinals. CARA's national surveys of U.S. parish leaders—including clergy, vowed religious, and other lay people—conducted in 2011 and 2012 revealed that 94 percent of U.S. parishes have a website. The digital space for these are often provided by their dioceses or private companies that specialize in church websites. A majority of those working in parish ministry, 56 percent, told us that they provide some form of content for their parish's websites. Nearly three in ten parish pastoral ministers in the U.S. (28 percent) told us they use Facebook in their ministry and 22 percent said they use YouTube. About one in ten (11 percent) said they blog as a part of their parish ministry.

Among CARA's surveys of the adult self-identified Catholic population, 9 percent say they regularly visit their parish website (i.e., once a month or more often) and 4 percent say they regularly visit their diocesan website. That is equivalent to about 5.3 million and 2.3 million adult Catholics, respectively, visiting these sites regularly. Of those Catholics who regularly visit their parish website, 81 percent evaluate these sites as "good" or "excellent."

Outside of the Church's diocesan and parish structure, there are too many well-followed Catholic blogs to list. Simply type "Whispers" into Google and the auto complete feature will finish with one of the most popular, Whispers in the Loggia (whispersintheloggia.blogspot.com) by Rocco Palmo. If something is happening in the Church it's a good bet Palmo is the first to report it. Type in "Anchoress" in Google and the top search result will take you to Elizabeth Scalia's blog (ww.patheos.com/blogs/theanchoress). She is also the Managing Editor of the Catholic Portal at Patheos—a faith and religion mega-site that hosts many of the most widely followed Catholic bloggers.

Many traditional Catholic print publications, from diocesan newspapers to national monthly magazines have managed the transition online successfully as well. The online outposts for Catholic weekly newspapers such as The National Catholic Reporter, The National Catholic Register, and Our Sunday Visitor are among the top 25 most visited Catholic-related websites in the country. The web homes for monthly Catholic magazines such as St. Anthony Messenger and America are also among these most visited sites.

Mass Times (masstimes.org) is also among the top 25 websites. This site provides locations and times for Catholic Masses around the world. Mass Times has also developed a popular app for smart phones and tablets. Catholic Match (catholicmatch.com) also attracts many visitors and helps single Catholics meet other single Catholics in their area. The USCCB (usccb.org) also has many visitors—peaking whenever the Church and the bishops are in the news—and is typically among the top 2,500 most visited websites in the United States.

As successful as these aforementioned sites are, there are still only three Catholic themed websites that are regularly drawing at least a million or more visitors from the United States each month. These include New Advent (newadvent.org), the website for the Eternal World Television Network or EWTN (ewtn.org), and the Vatican website (vatican.va).

To put this in perspective, to crack the top 100 ranking for U.S. traffic a website needs a monthly domestic traffic volume exceeding 10 million. CARA estimates the U.S. self-identified adult Catholic population to be approximately 58 million. Thus, in the abstract, a Catholic-related site could crack the top 100 if about 17 percent of Catholic adults visited it monthly. CARA surveys indicate there is no single site in Catholic new media that is obtaining an audience of this size yet.

The USCCB commissioned CARA to conduct a national poll of adult Catholics for the "Bishops and Blogger" session last fall to identify how Catholics are using new media. The survey was completed by 1,047 self-identified Catholics who were 18 years of age or older, resulting in a sampling margin of error of ±3.0 percentage points. As a rule of thumb, every 1 percentage point in the results was equivalent to about 583,000 adult Catholics in 2012.

This survey, as well as others conducted by CARA, indicates that Catholics are no less or more likely than Americans in general to use new technology to access digital or online media but most have yet to adopt widespread use of the Church's presence online. Many are unaware that it even exists. The adult Catholic population is nearly evenly divided between those aware of the Church's presence online and those who are not aware of this. The pie chart in figure 1 at left shows how visible adult Catholics feel the Church is online with about a quarter (24 percent) indicating "somewhat" or "very" visible, another quarter saying it is "only a little" or "not very" visible (23 percent), and more than half (53 percent) being unaware of any significant presence.

Respondents were asked if they regularly visit any Catholic-related websites. Those indicating that they do not, 55 percent of adult Catholics, cited the following reasons for not using Catholic new media: a lack of interest (43 percent), not being religious or Catholic enough (14 percent), or that visiting these sites were not necessary for them (13 percent).

As the figure 2 (left) shows, Catholics are still more likely to use television than any other source for religious or spiritual content. One in five adult Catholics (23 percent) watched a religious or spiritual program on television in the three months prior to being surveyed in 2012. In the same year, only 6 percent indicated that they have watched religious or spiritual video content online. For each area of content—video, audio, and reading materials—traditional media is still more widely used than new media alternatives. This finding is consistent across different generations of Catholics—from the oldest to the youngest adults.

At the same time adult Catholics spend, on average, two hours and 55 minutes online per day. Only 6 percent of respondents indicated they spent no time online on an average day. Five percent spent eight or more hours online on an average day. Figure 3 (previous page, bottom left) demonstrates the amount of time spent online is greatest among the youngest Catholic adults. Millennials (those born 1982 or later) spent an average of three hours and 43 minutes online per day compared to one hour and 48 minutes spent online by Pre-Vatican II Generation Catholics (i.e., those born before 1943).

For many Catholics some of this time online is spent on Facebook. Sixty two percent of adult Catholics have a profile on the social networking site. There are some age differences, with 82 percent of Millennials having a Facebook profile compared to 37 percent of Pre-Vatican II Catholics. Overall 67 percent of adult Catholics have a profile on at least one social networking site. Yet only 31 percent have a profile and specify their religion somewhere on their profile. This is equivalent to about 18.1 million adult Catholics.

Some are also spending time online reading Catholic-related blogs. Five percent say they read or followed blogs on the Catholic Church, faith, or spirituality, which was equivalent to 2.9 million individuals. Among weekly Mass attenders, 13 percent read or followed blogs on the Church. Of those who read these blogs, 72 percent agree "somewhat" or "very much" that they do so to learn more about the Church's teachings and their faith and 71 percent say they do so to stay up-to-date on news of the Church. Generically, among all respondents, the following qualities are cited as being "somewhat" or "very" important to what attracts their interest to a blog: it informs (73 percent), it is about something they are really interested in (65 percent), it entertains (55 percent), and it is written by someone who is credible and respected (50 percent).

Even when away from a computer, some Catholics are connecting to their faith online using "apps" on their smartphones or tablets. Overall, 8 percent of adult Catholics who regularly use an applicable digital device indicate that they have at least one Catholic-related application that they use. This is equivalent to about 2.9 million people.

How interested would you be in the following types of content on a website? Adult Catholics responding as such:

| | "Somewhat" or "very" | "Very" only |

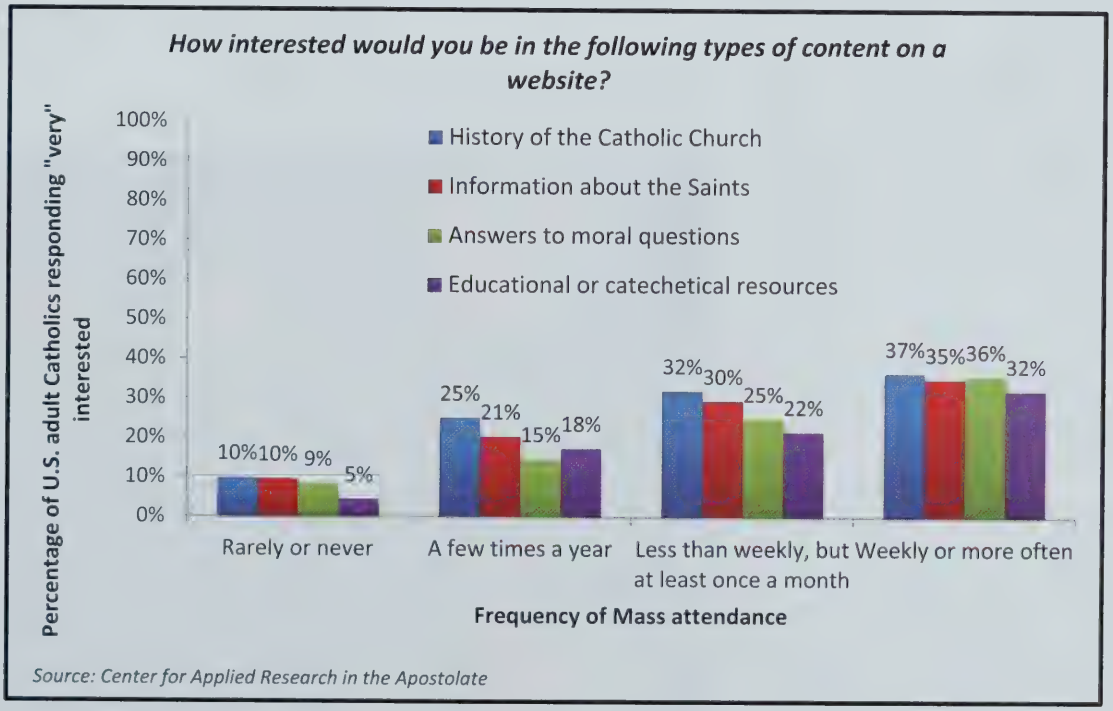
Whether at their desktop or on a smartphone, what are Catholics drawn to online? As shown in figure 4 above, respondents expressed the greatest interest in seeing more historical content about the Church (49 percent say they would be "somewhat" or "very" interested) and information about the Saints online (46 percent). Slightly fewer, 44 percent, expressed at least "somewhat" interest in content about answers to moral questions. Forty-two percent expressed this level of interest in news stories about the Catholic Church and 40 percent were this interested in educational or catechetical resources online.

A third or more said they would be at least "somewhat" interested in content related to: messages from Church leaders (37 percent), prayers (36 percent), scripture (35 percent), and videos about the Catholic Church (33 percent). Less than a third (but more than one in five) said they would be "somewhat" or "very" interested in content related to: religious music (31 percent), homilies (28 percent), and bulletin boards and places for conversations with others (22 percent).



It was surprising to some that "history of the Catholic Church" and "information about the Saints" were selected by so many. Yet other data and events may provide some insight. For example, New Advent (newadvent.org) often draws more monthly U.S. visitors than

Figure 5.

any other Catholic website. One of its most popular features is a Catholic encyclopedia that provides information about Church history and the saints. Also, in the spring of 2013 The History Channel broadcast the series "The Bible" and surprised many when it beat out many network shows in the ratings. The series had a ripple effect online driving U.S. Google search volumes for "Bible" to a nine year high.

There are also some important sub-group differences in what Catholics are interested in online related to their faith. Figures 5 and 6 (previous page) show some of the largest differences in interest related to age and frequency of Mass attendance. Catholics who attend Mass at least once a month indicate more interest than those who attend Mass less frequently in all of the topics listed. An interest in history is indeed shared by many. Even in the 21st century, many Catholics appear to want to use the newest technologies and media to learn more about the past.

How to successfully package and present Catholic content online is a challenging question for Church leaders. For example, nearly seven in ten adult Catholics (68 percent) use YouTube but only 6 percent of these respondents say they regularly watch religious content on the site. The top three uses are for music videos (56 percent), comedy content (43 percent), and viral videos (42 percent). Even weekly Mass attenders and Pre-Vatican II Catholics say they are more likely to use YouTube for viral videos than religious content. Drawing more to Catholic content may require some unconventional blending of information and entertainment.

Others have noted that there are wrinkles to the Church's presence online that aren't fairly represented in the survey data about media use. One of these voices is a popular Catholic blogger and author of The Church and New Media (Our Sunday Visitor, 2011) Brandon Vogt (brandonvogt.com). He reacted to some of CARA's survey results on his blog by insightfully noting that "the survey seems to explore intentional online engagement. But new media's great power comes in part through its unintentionality. A young secularist searching for Bob Dylan stumbles across one of Fr. Barron's YouTube videos. That video leads him to another, then to another, and soon he finds that he's listening to proofs for the existence of God. A fallen-away Catholic browsing Facebook sees a religious discussion and is drawn in. First they're just a reader, then they add a comment, but someone responds and soon enough they're in deep discussion about faith or morals."

Catholics have indeed created a powerful new media infrastructure. There are signs that this has drawn the attention and use of a core of interested Catholics. It's potential to draw in the periphery of Catholics not yet paying much attention or non-Catholics is indeed remarkable and something to be quite optimistic about.

"It's very intense and it's very emotionally draining because you think about it night and day. This would be one of the most important things I'd ever have to do – to vote for the new successor of Peter. So there's a lot of intensity."–Cardinal Timothy Dolan

VATICAN CITY – The process of choosing a pope has been refined over the centuries and, while many in the mainstream media try to present it in terms borrowed from a political election, the rules and the rituals continually emphasize the exercise as a heavy responsibility fulfilled in an atmosphere of prayer.

After participating in his first conclave, the conclave that elected Pope Francis, New York's Cardinal Timothy Dolan told CNN: "It's very intense and it's very emotionally draining because you think about it night and day. This would be one of the most important things I'd ever have to do – to vote for the new successor of Peter. So there's a lot of intensity."

Within the Sistine Chapel, he said, "There's a beautiful sense of the gentle movement of the Holy Spirit."

"No thunder and lightning. No sledgehammers. No people getting knocked off their horse," the cardinal said. "But you gradually begin to sense a movement toward a man. You pray hard. You talk a lot to one another ."

Prayers are on the lips of those candidates receiving votes, too.

The cardinals draw lots to serve as ballot counters inside the Sistine Chapel. They open the ballots one by one and read out the name written there.

Meeting with media representatives just three days after his election, Pope Francis said that during the conclave, "I was seated next to the archbishop emeritus of Sao Paolo and prefect emeritus of the Congregation for the Clergy, Cardinal Claudio Hummes: a good friend, a good friend! When things were looking dangerous, he encouraged me. And when the votes reached two-thirds, there was the usual applause, because the pope had been elected. And he gave me a hug and a kiss, and said: 'Don't forget the poor!' And those words came to me: the poor, the poor. Then, right away, thinking of the poor, I thought of Francis of Assisi," which is why he chose the name.

Preparing for the conclave with meetings

The days or weeks between the death or resignation of a pope and the start of a conclave to elect his successor are filled with "general congregations" – the closest thing in the process to a business meeting, although that too is opened with prayer.

Every cardinal who is under the age of 80 is expected to attend unless he has a serious health issue or other serious reason to request to be excused from what is, after all, his primary duty as a cardinal. The cardinals who are over 80 are welcome and even encouraged to participate in the meetings, sharing their experience and reflections.

Most cardinals say the general congregations are the reason why the conclave itself is so prayerful and why it takes so little time for a candidate to garner two-thirds of the cardinals' votes and be elected pope. The sessions before the conclave give the cardinals time to discuss the current state of the church, the Roman Curia and even the Vatican budget; to share what is going well and what the challenges are in their local church and the church around the world; and to discuss the qualities they would like to see in the next pope.

The cardinals themselves decide how many general congregations to hold, and they set the date for the start of the conclave. While the meetings do not include a discussion of individual candidates, the cardinals continue the general congregations until the majority reaches the point of believing it is time to move from debate to prayer and voting.

As the general congregations continued after the resignation of Pope Benedict XVI, newscasters and journalists repeatedly asked when the conclave would begin. When all the cardinal electors had arrived for the meetings and a date still was not set, some automatically decided there must be real problems or real divisions among the cardinals. Unlike in 2005 when the general congregations took place over a two-week period before and after memorial Masses and the funeral of Blessed John Paul II, meeting was the only thing the cardinals seemed to be doing after Pope Benedict moved to the papal villa at Castel Gandolfo. The Vatican spokesman tried to calm the reporters, saying the cardinals were serious about understanding "the problems of the church in the world, the problems of governing the church (and) the principal expectations that will await the candidate they elect. They must prepare for this," said Jesuit Father Federico Lombardi.

In the days before the 2013 conclave, the College of Cardinals held 10 general congregations, with each session lasting about three hours. About 150 cardinals were present at each session – the 115 electors under 80 years old, plus 35 elder cardinals. During those days they also held a "holy hour" of prayer in St. Peter's Basilica, celebrated Sunday Mass at their titular churches in Rome and then gathered March 12 for the formal Mass opening the conclave.

Cardinals from around the world enter the Vatican's Sistine Chapel March 12, 2013 as they begin the conclave to elect a successor to Pope Benedict XVI.

Invoking the saints and the Holy Spirit, the conclave begins

A few hours after celebrating Mass in St. Peter's Basilica, the cardinals gathered in the Pauline Chapel of the Apostolic Palace – a chapel decorated with Michelangelo's murals of the conversion of St. Paul and the crucifixion of St. Peter. From there, they set out for the Sistine Chapel, chanting the Litany of the Saints, asking a host of holy men and women to help them with their responsibility of electing a new successor of St. Peter.

Fewer than half of the 115 cardinals who walked in formal procession into the Sistine Chapel March 12, 2013, had participated in the 2005 conclave that elected Pope Benedict. Two of the veterans – Honduran Cardinal Oscar Rodriguez Maradiaga of Tegucigalpa and South African Cardinal Wilfrid Napier – described the scene as being one of deep prayer and some trembling.

As soon as they are all in the chapel, the cardinals invoke the assistance of the Holy Spirit by singing the hymn "Veni Creator Spiritus." They recite together an oath of secrecy, then seal it by walking up to the Book of the Gospels, one by one, placing their right hand on the Scriptures and saying, "So help me God and these holy Gospels that I touch with my hand."

But before they begin voting, they listen to a meditation delivered by a cleric known for his "sound doctrine, wisdom and moral authority," who is called to speak about "the need for careful discernment in choosing the new pope." For the 2013 conclave, the cardinals chose 87-year-old Maltese Cardinal Prosper Grech, an Augustinian priest and expert on the fathers of the early church.

Casting the ballots

Under the rules governing the conclave, secret ballots can be cast once on the first day of the conclave, then normally twice during each subsequent morning and evening session. Except for periodic pauses, the voting continues until a new pontiff is elected. Only cardinals under the age of 80 at the beginning of the "sede vacante," or the period between the death or lawful resignation of one pope and the election of his successor, are eligible to enter the conclave and vote for the next pope. Cardinal Grech, being over 80, left the Sistine Chapel after offering the 115 electors his meditation, which was not made public.

In theory, any baptized male Catholic can be elected pope, but current church law says he must become a bishop before taking office; since the 15th century, the electors always have chosen a fellow cardinal. Each vote begins with the preparation and distribution of paper ballots by two masters of ceremonies, who are among a handful of noncardinals allowed into the chapel at the start of the session. The paper ballots they hand out are rectangular. On the top half is printed the Latin phrase "Eligo in Summum Pontificem" ("I elect as the most high pontiff"), and the lower half is blank for the writing of the name of the person chosen. After all the noncardinals have left the chapel, the cardinals fill out their ballots secretly, legibly, and fold them twice .

Each cardinal carries his ballot up to a table set in front of the altar. Standing before a crucifix and Michelangelo's massive fresco of the "Last Judgment," he vows in Latin that he is voting according to his conscience. The other 114 cardinals pray as their confreres cast their ballots, "so it is like a big cenacle of prayer," Cardinal Rodriguez Maradiaga said. "This is the most loving experience, how an election should be. I wish all the elections in the world could be like that: in an atmosphere of prayer."

Cardinal Napier said: "Probably the most solemn, the most difficult, frightening (moment) is when you go with your ballot paper in your hand and hold it up in front of the altar and say, 'I call on the Lord Jesus, who will be my judge, to witness that I am voting for the one I believe to be worthy.' That's really a moment of intense emotion, faith, all these emotions come together at that point. If I'm voting for unworthy reasons I'm actually asking Jesus to judge me, to condemn me, so it's a very, very solemn moment."

After each cardinal casts his ballot, the papers are opened and read out, one by one. Since each cardinal has a complete list of cardinals, "you're ticking off as the votes are being cast for one person or another and then totting it up at the end," Cardinal Napier said. If no candidate has reached the two-thirds required for a valid election, the ballots and all the lists with their counts are gathered and burned in one of the stoves in the back of the Sistine Chapel. A second stove, used for the first time during the 2005 conclave, is ignited at the same time with chemical pellets that emit thick clouds of black smoke to signify a vote without a new pope or white smoke to signal that a new pope has been elected.

U.S. Cardinal J. Francis Stafford, who celebrated his 80th birthday in July 2012 and was ineligible to vote for a new pope in 2013, told Catholic News Service, "The conclave is basically an extended liturgy," with prayer punctuating every moment of the day, including the voting. The cardinals call "the Holy Spirit to help us in such a heavy burden – I'm happy in a way that I am not being called to do it again; it's too heavy a burden."

If a conclave has not elected a pope after three full days of voting, the cardinals pause for at least a morning of prayer. They pause again after every seven ballots until they have voted 33 or 34 times without electing a pope. At that point, about 12 or 13 days into the conclave, the cardinals must move to a run-off between the top two vote-getters. The 50-day conclave of 1830-31, which ended with the election of Pope Gregory XVI, was the last conclave to take more than a week. In the past 100 years, the longest was the five-day conclave in 1922 that led to the election of Pope Pius XI. Under rule changes made by Pope Benedict in 2007, once a run-off has been triggered, the two candidates may not participate in the voting, but they remain in the Sistine Chapel. Even though there are only two candidates, a valid election still requires at least two-thirds of the votes.

Announcing "Habemus papam"

When a candidate obtains two-thirds of the votes, the cardinal highest in rank, in the name of all the electors, asks him, "Do you accept your canonical election as Supreme Pontiff?" And, as soon as he has received the consent, he asks him, "By what name do you wish to be called?" The rules for a conclave and the book of prayers and rituals for the conclave make no provision for a candidate declining a valid election. In "Universi Dominici Gregis," his 1996 rules for the conclave, Blessed John Paul II wrote: "I also ask the one who is elected not to refuse, for fear of its weight, the office to which he has been called, but to submit humbly to the design of the divine will. God who imposes the burden will sustain him with his hand, so that he will be able to bear it. In conferring the heavy task upon him, God will also help him to accomplish it and, in giving him the dignity, he will grant him the strength not to be overwhelmed by the weight of his office."

If the elected man already is a bishop, once he accepts the office he "immediately is the bishop of the church of Rome, the true pope and head of the college of bishops; he acquires full and supreme power over the universal church," according to the "Ordo Rituum Con-

10 Interesting Facts About Papal Elections:

By Ambrogio Piazzoni, vice prefect of the Vatican Library and author of the book, "History of Papal Elections."
(Reprinted with permission from Catholic News Service)

1. Electing a pope is the main and most serious responsibility of members of the College of Cardinals. In the last several hundred years, Piazzoni said, cardinals have missed a conclave only if they were seriously ill or if they were impeded from traveling to Rome by their governments.
2. The conclave that elected Pope Francis I was the 75th conclave in the history of the church, he said. He dates the conclaves – elections conducted while the cardinal-electors were closed off in a room – to Pope Boniface VIII, who was elected in 1295 and inserted the conclave rules into the Code of Canon Law.
3. During World War II, Pope Pius XII, like several of his predecessors who were popes in times of war, left a document informing the College of Cardinals that if he were taken prisoner, he was no longer to be considered the pope, so the cardinals were to hold a conclave and elect a new pontiff.
4. Pope Gregory XV, elected in 1621, was the last pope to be elected by "spontaneous acclamation" when all the cardinals, believed to be acting under the influence of the Holy Spirit, proclaim the same candidate to be pope. Piazzoni said almost immediately after taking office, Pope Gregory changed the conclave rules to require that such a "spontaneous clavis," the book of rites and rituals approved by Blessed John Paul in 1998. The master of papal liturgical celebrations, a notary and two witnesses draw up a document certifying acceptance by the new pope and the name taken by him.

As the ballots and white-smoke producing pellets are burned, the new pope goes to the so-called "Room of Tears," a small room attached to the Sistine Chapel, where three white papal cassocks – small, medium and large – and other papal vestments are hanging. He changes, then rejoins the cardinals for a brief prayer service, which includes a passage either from the Gospel of Matthew – "You are Peter and upon this rock I will build my church" – or from the Gospel of John where Jesus says to Peter, "Feed my sheep." The cardinals approach the new pope and pay homage to him, then sing the "Te Deum" hymn of thanksgiving to God.

As the bells of St. Peter's Basilica ring and thousands of people run toward St. Peter's Square, the new pope goes back to the Pauline Chapel and silently prays before the Blessed Sacrament. Only then does the senior cardinal deacon – in 2013, French Cardinal Jean-Louis Tauran – go to the central balcony of St. Peter's Basilica and declare to the public, "Habemus papam" (We have a pope).

acclamation" be confirmed immediately with a written ballot in the conclave. He also was first to rule that the cardinals must cast their votes secretly, in writing, rather than verbally.

5. Election by acclamation is no longer considered valid, nor is the "election by compromise" in which the cardinals, after a stalemate, unanimously decide to choose a few of their members and delegate to them the power to elect a pope. The last pope elected with that method, Piazzoni said, was Pope Clement IV in 1265 who was elected by two cardinals.
6. Pope Paul VI was the pope who clarified the exact moment when a candidate becomes pope: It is the moment he accepts his election, as long as he previously had been ordained a bishop. If the cardinals choose someone who has never been ordained a bishop, the ordination takes place immediately, then the election as pope becomes valid.
7. When Blessed Gregory X was elected by a cardinals meeting in Viterbo, Italy, in 1271, he was not present and he was not even a priest yet.
8. Pope Nicholas II, who served in 1059-61, was the pope who ruled that only cardinals were eligible to vote to elect a pope.
9. "To put an end to discord" created when two or more candidates received a similar number of votes, Pope Alexander II in 1169 established the rule that a candidate must receive a two-thirds majority to be elected.
10. Pope John Paul II was the first pope to specify that a conclave must take place in the Sistine Chapel. Previous popes recommended the chapel, but throughout history the conclaves have been held in a variety of churches in Rome and elsewhere.

2012 Year in Review

BY BARB FRAZE AND CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE STAFF

WASHINGTON – It was a year that started with cries of joy from Anglicans who had been asking to join the Catholic Church en masse and ended with the tears of a nation, as a gunman opened fire at an elementary school in Connecticut. But throughout 2012, the dominant talk was of the U.S. lagging economy, its effects on millions of Americans – including U.S. presidential candidates – and, as the year ended, how to avoid the so-called fiscal cliff.

While the slowly improving economy was credited with helping President Barack Obama win re-election, unemployment figures remained stubbornly high – 7.8 percent for November and December, down from 8.3 percent in January and February – and other economic indicators showed limited progress.

The malaise spread across all sectors of the U.S. economy. Catholic Charities USA affiliates repeated their declarations throughout the year that the volume of requests for help was sometimes more than they could handle and that one-time donors were among those seeking aid.

In a Labor Day statement, the chairman of the U.S. bishops' Committee on Domestic Justice and Human Development said: "Our country continues to struggle with a broken economy that is not producing enough decent jobs. Millions of Americans suffer from unemployment, underemployment or are living in poverty as their basic needs too often go unmet.

"As people of faith, we are called to stand with those left behind, offer our solidarity, and join forces with 'the least of these' to help meet their basic needs," said Bishop Stephen E. Blaire of Stockton, Calif., committee chairman. "Everyone and every institution has a role to play in building a more just economy," which "serves the person rather than the other way around," he said.

Catholic social teaching: front and center

Catholic social teaching's concern for human life and dignity took center stage as the role of federal spending was debated by political leaders and assessed by the electorate. Concepts rooted in church teaching – subsidiarity, solidarity and the common good – were important elements of the plot, offering Americans insight into principles that, church leaders repeatedly explained, must be considered when identifying spending priorities, even as the federal deficit grew.

"Our ongoing concerns remain centered on the care for the poor and most vulnerable in society," Bishop Blaire told Catholic News Service in December. "We cannot neglect them as we seek to stabilize our political economy."

"The common good requires that the people who are hurting the most will not be hurting even more as a result of efforts that are being taken to improve the economy," he said.

Bishop Richard E. Pates of Des Moines, Iowa, chairman of the bishops' Committee on International Justice and Peace, also chimed in, calling for continued funding of poverty-focused international assistance, which encompasses programs such as HIV/AIDS treatment, disaster aid, refugee services, health care, support for small farmers and aid to orphaned children. Such spending – totaling $20.2 billion in fiscal year 2012, or about 0.6 percent of the federal budget – helps promote human development and builds peace among nations, he said.

"It's also to keep people alive," Bishop Pates told Catholic News Service. "We're able to provide some of the (programs) that have long-lasting impact. It shows the American heart is really attached to this."

During the U.S. budget negotiations, Father Larry Snyder, president of Catholic Charities USA, focused his agency's message to Congress on preventing drastic cuts in funding for social service programs as well as protecting the charitable tax deduction that has existed since 1917.

"Our concern is that they don't try to take the easy way out, which is seen as cutting the services to the poor," Father Snyder told Catholic News Service. "That's too easy, and too often the poor become the folks on whose backs the budget gets balanced."

He said he was concerned that eliminating the tax deduction for charitable giving would decrease donations to Catholic Charities agencies nationwide. He urged Congress to address tax loopholes rather than eliminate the deduction. "This will have a definite impact on the lives of the poor. It's about Americans who are engaging in providing needed services through the nonprofit sector," he said. "This isn't a loophole. This is part of the fabric that has sustained American society."

Charitable donations not only help agencies like Catholic Charities help the poor, but also help them respond to emergencies such as Hurricane Sandy, later labeled a super storm. After causing more than 70 deaths in the Caribbean in October, Sandy wreaked havoc on the eastern United States, killing 125 people. A report from The Associated Press said the storm caused about $62 billion in damage and other losses in the U.S. – primarily in New York and New Jersey – making it the second costliest storm in U.S. history, after Hurricane Katrina in 2005.

After Hurricane Sandy made landfall Oct. 29, New Jersey, New York City and surrounding boroughs were among the areas hit the hardest. The storm surge reached 14 feet in some places, leaving millions without power.

Sister Joanne Dress, a Daughter of Charity and diocesan executive director of Catholic social services in the Diocese of Trenton, N.J., said when Sandy hit, the focus was on immediate needs, but weeks afterward, the long-term needs were being addressed through the network already in place in parishes and other Catholic social service agencies throughout the region.

"With many St. Vincent de Paul Society conferences and parish social concerns groups, we already have the framework and the process in place to help address the needs of residents in the impacted areas as they try to get back on their feet," she said. "We can't rebuild their homes, but we certainly can help them with some of the many things they will need to rebuild their lives."

Several dioceses around the country took up special collections to donate to Catholic Charities USA to help victims of the storm, and Catholic organizations and parishes sent truckloads of donations to the impacted areas.

Two new American cardinals

One of those visiting storm victims was New York Cardinal Timothy M. Dolan. Earlier, in February, the charismatic New York archbishop and Archbishop Edwin F. O'Brien, former archbishop of Baltimore and grand master of the Equestrian Order of the Holy Sepulchre of Jerusalem, were elevated to cardinal by Pope Benedict XVI. Both men had served as rector of the Pontifical North American College, the U.S. seminary in Rome, and both spoke of the cardinals' responsibility to elect a new pope.

Cardinal Dolan, with his effusive personality and sense of humor, was the darling of the international media. Meeting the press at North American College after the consistory, Cardinal Dolan warned photographers not to take pictures of his feet because, he said, "I forgot to put on my red socks." He also told journalists he was reading the Gospel story of the devil tempting Christ and said to himself, "Dolan, you've got temptations galore. I've always had them and now I've got one more – to let this go to my head literally. And you can't because it's all about humility, and it's all about service and love and being close to God and his people."

Cardinal O'Brien told reporters that, given Cardinal Dolan's position as archbishop of New York and especially given the brilliance of his presentation on new evangelization Feb. 17 to the College of Cardinals, the New York prelate was bound to be given special responsibilities in the universal church.

But Cardinal Dolan, president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, also took the lead at home: in the bishops' defense of traditional marriage and what they saw as infringements on religious liberty, particularly the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' mandate requiring most religious employers to provide free coverage of artificial contraception, sterilization and abortion-causing drugs in their insurance plans, even if they are morally opposed to such coverage. The mandate, put in place in August 2011, has a narrow exemption for employers who object to providing these services on religious grounds, namely if they serve or hire people primarily of their own faith. It does not include a conscience clause for employers who object to providing such coverage. The bishops repeatedly said the mandate is a restriction on religious liberty because the requirement violates church teaching. They urged lay Catholics to speak out against infringements to religious freedom. Catholics around the country responded by participating in Masses, devotions, holy hours, educational presentations and rallies during the June 21 to July 4 campaign of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops called a "Fortnight for Freedom."

Members of the Religion Newswriters Association, the world's oldest and largest professional nondenominational association for journalists who write about religion, picked the U.S. Catholic bishops' opposition to the HHS mandate as the No. 1 religion story of 2012. In their annual poll, they also chose Cardinal Dolan as the year's top newsmaker.

Catholics and the U.S. presidential election

Although the U.S. bishops fought the HHS mandate, for the most part, Catholic leadership kept a low profile when it came to public comment related directly to the presidential race, except for offering Catholics guidance for election decisions as outlined in the quadrennial statement issued by the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops: "Forming Consciences for Faithful Citizenship."

As a bloc, Catholics voted pretty much like the general public in supporting Obama's re-election: 50 percent of Catholics voted for Obama compared to 48 percent for GOP nominee Mitt Romney. Among all voters, the percentages were 51 percent for Obama and 48 percent for Romney. Just as the breakdown among white voters overall swung more for Romney – 59 percent for Romney and 39 percent for Obama – exit polls also showed it was the same among white Catholics, with almost the same outcome: 59 percent of white Catholics for Romney and 40 percent for Obama.

Exit polls do not separate Hispanics by religion, but they were a boon to Obama, with more than 71 percent of Latinos voting for him. A majority of Latinos in the United States, about 68 percent, are Catholic, and Latinos account for about a third of U.S. Catholics. The wide margin of Latinos who voted for Obama led to post-election declarations by both Republicans and Democrats that they would quickly work to pass immigration reform legislation. The issue was cited by Latino voters as a major reason they supported Obama. Before election week was out, Republican leaders were acknowledging the role Hispanic voters played in the outcome and saying the time had come to pass comprehensive immigration reform.

At a Dec. 4 news conference, Bishop Jaime Soto of Sacramento, Calif., said whether legislation gets through Congress in one piece or as a series of bills is less important than that the broad goals are accomplished.

"This is a humanitarian issue with moral implications," said the bishop, chairman of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops' Committee on Cultural Diversity. "We can no longer accept the work of undocumented immigrants while scapegoating them." The goal of comprehensive reform, according to Bishop Soto, is "making families, as well as all of America, whole again."

A new home for Anglicans

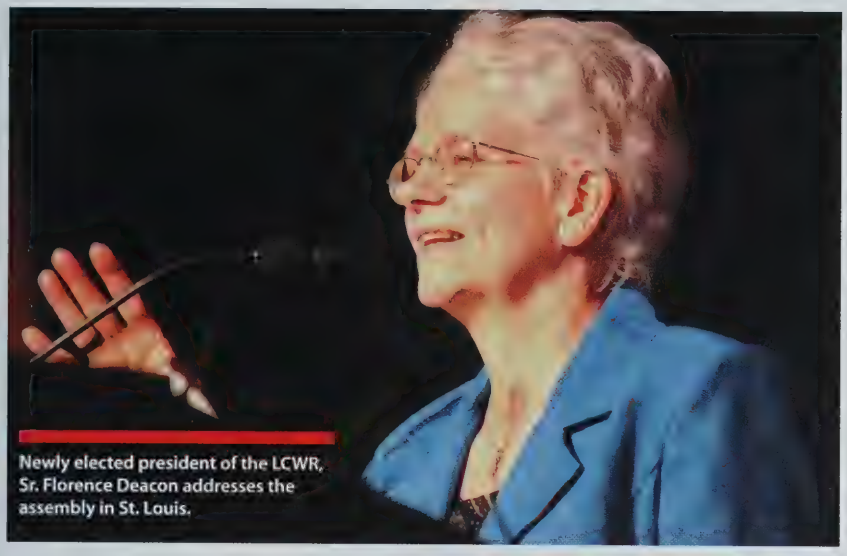
Making Christians whole or unified was an aim of Pope Benedict's 2009 apostolic constitution announcing that he would establish Anglican ordinariates for Anglicans wishing to be received into the Catholic Church and, on Jan. 1, 2012, the Vatican announced the first such ordinariate in the United States. The Personal Ordinariate of the Chair of St. Peter – functionally equivalent to a diocese, but national in scope – is based at a parish in Houston. The Vatican named as its head Msgr. Jeffrey N. Steenson, the former Episcopal bishop of the Rio Grande who was ordained a Catholic priest of the Archdiocese of Santa Fe, N.M., in February 2009. Parishes and communities accepted into the ordinariate are fully Catholic but retain elements of their Anglican heritage and traditions, particularly in the liturgy.

Msgr. Steenson and his wife, Debra, have three grown children – a daughter and two sons – and a grandson. Because he is married, Msgr. Steenson will not be ordained a bishop and will not be able to ordain priests. However, otherwise he functions as a bishop, and he is a voting member of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

A confrontation with the Leadership Conference of Women Religious

Throughout the year, the bishops found themselves defending a Vatican-ordered doctrinal assessment of the Leadership Conference of Women Religious, repeatedly emphasizing that it was not directed at the tens of thousands of women religious whose communities are associated with LCWR but at the actions of the organization itself.

The Vatican appointed Archbishop J. Peter Sartain of Seattle to oversee the controversial measure. He was charged with providing "review, guidance and approval, where necessary, of the work" of the LCWR, a Maryland-based umbrella group that claims about 1,500 leaders of U.S. women's communities as members, representing about 80 percent of the country's 57,000 women religious. The appointment came the same day the Vatican's Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith released an eight-page "doctrinal assessment" of the LCWR, citing "serious doctrinal problems which affect many in consecrated life," and announced a reform of the organization to ensure its fidelity to Catholic teaching in areas including abortion, euthanasia, women's ordination and homosexuality.



Msgr. Jeffrey N. Steenson, Ordinary of the Personal Ordinariate of the Chair of St. Peter gives the homily during a special Mass of confirmation.

One of two bishops appointed to help Archbishop Sartain, Bishop Leonard P. Blair of Toledo, Ohio, told the Catholic Chronicle, his diocesan newspaper: "The biggest distortion of all is the claim that the CDF and the bishops are attacking or criticizing the life and work of our Catholic sisters in the United States. … What the CDF is concerned about ... is the particular organization known as the LCWR."

After consultation with its members, on June 1, the LCWR's national board criticized the Vatican's action as "based on unsubstantiated accusations and the result of a flawed process that lacked transparency," saying it had "caused scandal and pain throughout the church community and created greater polarization." The reform was the target of Internet-based protests and of generally unfavorable commentary in the press. In August, LCWR representatives met in St. Louis for four days of contemplative silence, listening and prayer. At the end of the meeting LCWR leaders, speaking on behalf of the entire group, said they would pursue "open and honest dialogue" with church officials about the assessment.

Before the bishops' general meeting in Baltimore in November, Archbishop Sartain, Newly elected president of the LCWR, Sr. Florence Deacon addresses the assembly in St. Louis.

Bishop Blair and Bishop Thomas J. Paprocki of Springfield, Ill., met with LCWR leaders.

"The discussion was open and cordial, and those present agreed to meet again to continue the conversation," said a brief statement issued Nov. 12 by Franciscan Sister Florence Deacon, LCWR president, and Archbishop Sartain.

Less than six weeks later, the LCWR and U.S. bishops were among Catholics issuing statements asking for a change from a culture of violence to a culture of life after gunman Adam Lanza entered Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Conn., and killed 20 first graders and six adults before killing himself. He also had shot his mother in their home.

But the response to the Dec. 14 Newtown tragedy also included concrete signs of Catholics rolling up their sleeves to help the grieving. Rodd Blessey, youth minister at the city's St. Rose of Lima Catholic Church, said Catholic volunteers from throughout Connecticut were using their vacation time to help in whatever way they could.

The bishops noted that "guns are too easily accessible" and cited a 2006 Vatican document that stressed the importance of enacting concrete controls on handguns and noted that "limiting the purchase of such arms would certainly not infringe on the rights of anyone."

Rodd Blessey, youth minister at the city's St. Rose of Lima Catholic Church, said Catholic volunteers from throughout Connecticut were using their vacation time to help in whatever way they could.

"They've sorted mail and handed out prayer cards. The Knights (of Columbus) have parked cars, opened doors, helped the police and cleared and cleaned the church between the back-to-back funerals this week ... They're feeding the police and providing tents and a warm place for them to stand; they're tending the memorials and going to the post office to collect packages."

"There are no words," said the pastor, Msgr. Robert Weiss, giving voice to the sentiments of millions of Americans.

Materials and Imagery

Rambusch works with its clients to develop beautiful visual imagery commemorating the religious missions and remarkable lives of our great country's women and men. We employ many materials—mosaic, stained glass, wood, marble, bronze and brass. Our work varies in size from a 1-1/4" hand-held medallion, to mosaics measuring 6' wide x 12' tall.

"Lily of the Mohawks," St. Kateri Tekakwitha (1656-1680) is the first Native American to be canonized. She suffered greatly for her faith, dying at 24. Her beatification assured, Reverend Wayne Paysse, Executive Director of the Black and Indian Mission Office (www.blackandindianmission.org), approached Rambusch to strike a commemorative medal in bronze. Our deep involvement produced rich iconography. On the front, lilies encircle her countenance. On the verso is the turtle, symbol of her clan carrying maize, squash, and beans, the three sisters of American Indian horticulture.

The first American-born priest on the path to canonization, Michael J. McGivney (1852-1890) made spoons in a New England brass mill at age 13, directly witnessing the devastating effects of millwork and early death upon families. Ordained at 25, he founded the Knights of Columbus, providing financial assistance to widows and orphans. He died at the age of 38. His commemoration is the latest in a series of windows Rambusch has designed and fabricated for the Rev. Patrick Elliott, Holy Family Church in Ogden, UT.

Since its completion in 1926, Rambusch has designed and fabricated liturgical furnishings and lighting systems for the Cathedral of St. Joseph.

The Lombard Romanesque style inspired architect Edward J. Weber when he designed the edifice.

Tastes and needs, styles and liturgical requirements change. Slate and domestic floor tiles replaced the original sanctuary floor sometime in the 1970s.

Recently, Rambusch fully restored its original material, color and pattern, guided by archeological evidence found under the baldachin. The comprehensive lighting system and newly installed breccia and travertine furnishings return the sanctuary interior to its remarkable 1920s richness.

Bishop: Most Reverend Michael J. Bransfield

Rector: Very Reverend Kevin Michael Quirk, J.C.D.

A—Indicates Archdiocese. The Archdiocese of Washington includes the District of Columbia and five counties of Maryland. Dioceses traverse state license in the following instances only: Cheyenne includes all of Yellowstone National Park; South Norwich includes Fisher's Island; Wilmington includes the eastern shores of Maryland; and Gallup includes parts of Arizona and New Mexico.

A USER'S GUIDE TO THE OFFICIAL CATHOLIC DIRECTORY®

Each year the editors of The Official Catholic Directory® seek added ways of serving their subscribers. Although the book may never answer every question, this is the conscientious goal; its format, arrangement and editorial features are directed toward the convenience and needs of the public. Comments and suggestions are welcome. For the benefit of the subscriber and a more efficient use of The Official Catholic Directory® and its cross references, a summary of the contents and their meaning follows:

The Official Catholic Directory® Glossary
A listing of some of the ecclesiastical terms and organizations found in the Directory.

The Governing Bodies in Vatican City
A chronological table of the Supreme Roman Pontiffs; the Pope, and an alphabetical list of the College of Cardinals; the duties of each of the agencies of the Roman Curia, and other commissions and institutions associated with the Holy See, along with their officers; a list of the Seminaries and National Colleges in Rome; the Apostolic Nunciature and the Permanent Observer Mission to the United Nations, with their staff. As foreign organizations, these entities are not included in the USCCB group tax exemption ruling ("Group Ruling").

The Catholic Church in the United States (Provinces)
The archdioceses and dioceses of the United States arranged under the provinces to which they belong, listed with their active archbishops and bishops.

Ecclesiastical forms of address recognized in the United States. Formal forms of address for correspondence with the clergy in the United States.

U.S. Cardinals, Archbishops, Bishops, Archabbots and Abbots
An alphabetical list of Cardinals, Archbishops, Bishops, Archabbots and Abbots, arranged within their specific title. Also listed is their address and status, followed by a hierarchical/chronological list by year.

United States Conference of Catholic Bishops
The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops is a permanent institute composed of Catholic bishops of the United States of America in and through which the bishops exercise in a communal or collegial manner the pastoral mission entrusted to them by the Lord Jesus of sanctification, teaching, and leadership, especially by devising forms and methods of the apostolate suitably adapted to the circumstances of the times. Such exercise is intended to offer appropriate assistance to each bishop in fulfilling his particular ministry in the local Church, to effect a commonality of ministry addressed to the people of the United States of America, and to foster and express communion with the Church in other nations within the Church universal, under the leadership of its chief pastor, the Pope.

SPECIAL NOTATIONS USED IN THE DIRECTORY

An asterisk (*) denotes a tax-exempt organization that has its own IRS exemption status and is not covered by the USCCB Group Ruling. The Group Ruling allows for the exemption from federal income tax of all Catholic institutions listed in The Official Catholic Directory® for that year. The exemption was established in 1946 and has been extended every year since then.

[CEM] in a parish listing indicates that a cemetery is connected to the parish.

[JC] indicates a joint cemetery, which is a cemetery being utilized by more than one parish. A number following [CEM] or [JC] indicates the number of cemeteries owned by the parish or joint cemeteries shared with other parishes.

A dagger † next to a name in the Necrology denotes a deceased priest. A Maltese cross ✠ denotes a deceased member of the hierarchy.

THE GENERAL SUMMARY

Certain terms used in the General Summary may need additional explanation.

Extern Priests are priests who have not been incardinated into the diocese in which they are currently working and residing.

Health Care Centers include ancillary care systems, medical centers, sanitoriums, and hospices.

Specialized Homes refers to institutions which provide aid to abused children or adults, halfway homes, AIDS patients, ARC patients, ex-offenders, pregnant women, adjudicated delinquents, or runaway youths.

Special Centers for Social Services are institutions or services that provide assistance, such as hotline centers, food banks, homeless centers, legal aid services, or counseling services.

Residential Care of Children refers to orphanages, as opposed to day care centers.

Non-residential Schools for Handicapped are day schools which provide regular and religious education for physically and/or mentally handicapped students.

Received into Full Communion is used to describe people who have been baptized earlier in life and have now been received into full communion in the Catholic Church.

THE OFFICIAL CATHOLIC DIRECTORY GLOSSARY

Abbot

The superior of an autonomous community of men religious. He has general and sacramental jurisdiction over his community. The head of a prominent monastery or a congregation consisting of several monasteries is an archabbot.

Advocate

An ecclesiastical advocate is someone approved by Church authority to safeguard the rights of a party in a canonical process by arguments regarding the law and the facts of the case. [Cf. c. 1481 and CLSA Comm., p. 967]

Apostolate

Apostolate is the mission of Christ and participation in it. Its object is to bring Christ to others, its goal is the greater glory of God, its scope is universal. The work is carried out by every human agency by which the life of grace may be given or increased in the soul. A mandate from the Church is essential to the Catholic apostolate.

Archbishop

A bishop of a main or metropolitan diocese in an ecclesiastical province. The term is equivalent to metropolitan in the Western Church. It may also be granted to other ordinaries and non-residential bishops, and to the ordinary of a diocese outside a province.

Auditor

An official of a diocesan court, who gathers evidence and testimony and draws up a record of an ecclesiastical case.

Bishop

A bishop, by divine institution, carries on the work of the apostles. By reason of episcopal consecration, he shares in the triple apostolic function of teacher of doctrine, priest of sacred worship, and minister of church government. Bishops are responsible for the pastoral care of their dioceses. In addition, bishops have a responsibility to act in council to guide the Church. The term eparch is used in Eastern-rite churches.

The bishop to whom a particular or local church is entrusted is called a diocesan bishop or a residential bishop. Some other bishops receive Titular Sees over which they exercise no pastoral authority.
When the pastoral needs of a diocese or archdiocese warrant, an auxiliary bishop may be assigned to aid the residential bishop in governing his diocese. An auxiliary bishop is assigned when the residential bishop needs assistance in carrying out his duties because of ill health, advanced age, or amount of work. An auxiliary bishop does not have the right of succession within his diocese.

In special circumstances, such as the advanced age or ill health of a diocesan bishop, a coadjutator bishop may be appointed to assist the principal bishop of a diocese. Coadjutator bishops have the right of succession in the diocese of their appointment from the time the See becomes vacant upon the death or retirement of its bishop.

Brother

A man who is a member of a religious order, but is not ordained or studying for the priesthood.

Cana Conference

A Catholic family movement, originally designed to aid married couples and families in their spiritual and interpersonal relationships. The program is now divided into Pre-Cana, for couples engaged to be married, and Cana Conferences, programs for married people.

Catholic Fraternal Organizations

National Catholic fraternal organizations operating in the United States include the Knights of Columbus and the Knights of Peter Claver. These organizations are not included in the USCCB group tax exemption ruling.

Censor Librorum

A theologian empowered by a bishop to judge a book's soundness in regard to Church teaching before publication.

Chancellor

The office of the chancellor (or the chancery) evolved from the practice in the early Church of appointing an official to sign and preserve the letters of the bishop. The first function of the chancellor in the present day is gathering, arranging, and safeguarding the acts of the diocesan curia. Dispensations and other official documents also originate from the chancery. In many dioceses, the chancellor continues to exercise ordinary jurisdiction as delegated by the diocesan bishop. He or she may be assisted by a separate official, the vice-chancellor.

Chapter

The general chapter of a religious order is an assembly of elected or appointed members and provincials. General chapters are convened for the election of officers, amendments to the constitution, and discussion and legislation of matters of concern to members and the order as a whole.

A provincial chapter conducts elections and handles legislation on a provincial level. The assembly is comprised of superiors and representatives of the religious.
A chapter of canons is a group of diocesan priests, appointed by the bishop of a diocese, with assigned authority or responsibilities.

College of Cardinals

The College of Cardinals is made up of the cardinals of the Church, who advise the Pope, assist in the central administration of the Church, head the various curial offices and congregations, administer the Holy See during a vacancy, and elect a new Pope. There are three ranks in the College of Cardinals, corresponding to the historical origins of cardinals in the Roman Catholic Church. All cardinals are bishops, but their rank within the College of Cardinals is characterized by one of the hierarchical ranks of bishop, priest, or deacon. Cardinals are given honorary title to churches in the city of Rome. [CF. c. 350; CLSA Comm., pp. 288-289]

1. Cardinal Bishops

There are two types of Cardinal Bishops: 1) those appointed by the Pope as titular bishops to one of the six suburban dioceses of Rome, and 2) Eastern-rite Patriarchs who are heads of Sees with apostolic origins that have been assigned to the College of Cardinals.

2. Cardinal Priests

Heads of Sees outside the city of Rome are assigned a "titular church," one of the churches in Rome. They have no pastoral authority over their titular church.

3. Cardinal Deacons

Cardinals of diaconal rank are bishops without Sees who head the various departments, offices, congregations, committees, and the Secretariat of State of the Roman Curia.

Confraternity of Christian Doctrine [CCD]

A lay organization established for religious education throughout a person's entire life. The term is currently used to describe Catholic parish-based religious education of children from kindergarten through high school. At the diocesan level, the offices are now more commonly known as offices of religious education or Christian formation. Nationally, the confraternity's religious education component has been taken over by the USCCB's Department of Education. It still exists as a separate entity under the USCCB Administrative Board, with responsibility for licensing religious and spiritual literature.

Consolidated School

The term, as used in the Directory, may refer to a school that takes students from more than one parish, or a school that was formed by the consolidation of two or three other schools. In both cases, it is a means of keeping a Catholic school in a given area open by taking students from the surrounding areas, regardless of parish boundaries.

Convent

In common usage, the term refers to a house of women religious. Originally, it referred to a building where members of religious institutes lived, and was not restricted to communities of women.

Cursillo

The cursillo de cristianidad, or "little course in Christianity," is a three-day program for achieving spiritual renewal or spiritual awakening. It seeks to convey a new sense of individual and organized apostolic action. The program, conducted by priests and laypeople, consists of a three-day weekend focused on prayer, study, and Christian action, and a follow-up program known as the post-cursillo.

Deacons
The diaconate is the first order or grade in ordained ministry. Its origins are in early apostolic times, when deacons preached and baptized under the direction of the presbyters or bishops. Any man who is to be ordained to the priesthood must first be ordained as a transitional deacon. Deacons serve in the ministry of liturgy, of the word, and of charity.

In 1967, Pope Paul VI reinstituted the Permanent Diaconate for men who do not plan to become ordained priests. Although men ordained as permanent deacons are sometimes referred to as "married deacons," the permanent diaconate is open to both married and unmarried men, with the understanding that after ordination, they may not marry even after the death of a spouse. Under the authority of the diocesan bishop, they perform the same functions as the transitional deacons while, at the same time, retaining their roles in society as family and business men.

Dean/Vicar Forane
The title of a priest appointed by the bishop to aid him in administering the parishes in a certain vicinity, called a "deanery," or "vicariates forane." The function of a dean, or vicar forane, involves promotion, coordination, and supervision of the common pastoral activity within the deanery or vicariate.

Defender of the Bond
A member of a diocesan tribunal, either a cleric or a lay person, holding a graduate degree in canon law, who is appointed by the diocesan bishop for cases concerning the nullity of sacred ordination or the nullity or dissolution of the marriage bond. The defender of the bond is responsible for a review of the evidence, scrutiny of the briefs, examination of witnesses, and maintenance of proper procedures during the trial. The defender also deals with some situations concerning the content of the litigation rather than the legal procedures.

Diocesan Consultors
An advisory council of diocesan priests, as appointed by a diocesan bishop, that assists in the administrative affairs of the diocese.

Diocesan Curia
The personnel and offices assisting the diocesan bishop in directing the pastoral activity, administration, and the exercise of judicial power of his diocese. The curia includes among its officers laity and religious as well as clergy. Principal officers of a diocesan curia are the vicar general of the diocese, the chancellor, officials of the diocesan tribunal, examiners, consultors, auditors, the promoter of justice and the defender of the bond.

Diocese
The standard term for a territorial division of the Church, entrusted to a bishop who rules in his own name as local ordinary, and not as a delegate of another. The chief diocese of a province is an archdiocese. It is headed by an archbishop. A diocese is usually limited to a definite territory so that it comprises all the faithful who inhabit that territory. [Cf. cc. 369 and 372, #1] In Eastern-rite churches, the term eparchy is used.

Eastern-rite [Oriental] Church
The term used to describe the Catholic churches which developed in Eastern Europe, Asia, and Africa. The Eastern-rite churches have their own distinctive liturgical and organizational systems. Each is considered equal to the Latin rite within the Church.

Eastern Catholic Association
The eastern catholic association is the association of all Eastern Catholic Bishops in the United States. All Eastern Catholic Bishops, diocesan bishops (and their equivalent in law) and auxiliaries are members. The Association represents the Armenian, Chaldean, Maronite Melikite, Romanian, Ruthenian and Ukrainian Churches. The Syriac, Syro-Malabar and Russian churches are also represented but without a bishop member since they are presently have no established hierarchy in the United States.

Ecumenism/Ecumenical Movement
A movement for spiritual understanding and unity among Christians and their churches. The term is also extended to apply to efforts toward greater understanding and cooperation between Christians and members of other faiths.

Exarch/Exarchy
A church jurisdiction, similar to a diocese, established for Eastern-rite Catholics living outside their native land. The head of an exarchy, usually a bishop, is an exarch.

Hierarchy
In general, the term refers to the ordered body of clergy, divided into bishops, priests, and deacons. In Catholic practice, the term refers to the bishops of the world or of a particular region.

Holy Name Society
A lay organization which seeks to aid its members in living a genuinely Christian life. The society organizes retreats and other spiritual and devotional exercises.

Holy See
The term refers to the diocese of Rome. Used in reference to the governance of the Church, it refers to the Pontiff, the Roman Curia, and the Sacred College.

Legion of Mary
A lay organization established to assist the clergy in the sanctification of its members' souls, and the spread of the Christian faith and spiritual service to others. Members participate in almost every form of social service and Catholic action, including evangelization. The organization was founded in 1921.

Metropolitan
The archbishop of an archdiocese in a province. He has limited supervisory powers and influence over the other dioceses and bishops in the province.

Military Ordinariate [Archdiocese for the Military Services, U.S.A.]
A nonterritorial diocese for American Catholics and their dependents who are in the military or affiliated with the armed forces. Personnel employed by or engaged in diplomatic missions for the U.S. government in countries where U.S. military forces are stationed also belong to the Military Ordinariate.

Mission
A mission, or quasi-parish, is a parish which has not been established because it lacks one or more of the following qualifications: a resident pastor; necessary financial resources; territorial boundaries; or a natural grouping by way of rite, nationality, or language. Missions are attached to some parishes under the care of their pastors.

Moderator of the Curia
A bishop or priest, appointed by the diocesan bishop, who is concerned primarily with administrative matters and with supervising those working in the curia.

Monastery
An autonomous community house of a religious order, which may or may not be a monastic order. The term is used more specifically to refer to a community house of men religious or women religious in which they lead a contemplative life separate from the world.

Monsignor
An honorary ecclesiastical title granted by the Pope to some diocesan priests. In the United States, the title is given to the vicar general of a diocese. In Europe, the title is also given to bishops.

Newman Apostolate
An apostolate to the Catholic college and university community, now commonly known as "campus ministry."

Notary
An elected or appointed ecclesiastical official who acts as a secretary in formal church proceedings. The notary records the minutes, testimony, etc., of the proceedings.

Opus Dei
A personal prelature dedicated to spreading through society an awareness of the call to Christian virtue, awareness, and witness in one's life and work. The organization was founded in 1928 and in 1950, it received Vatican approval as a secular institution. In 1982, it was designated a personal prelature, the Prelature of the Holy Cross and Opus Dei. Members are not members of a religious order, do not take vows, and do not live in community.

Ordinary
Diocesan bishops, religious superiors, and certain other diocesan authorities with jurisdiction over the clergy in a specific geographical area, or the members of a religious order.

Ordination/Ordain

The sacramental rite by which a "sacred order" is conferred (diaconate, priesthood, episcopacy).

Papal Audience

Request for attendance at papal audiences and similar functions may be addressed to: Bishops' Office for United States Visitors to the Vatican. Postal address: North American College, Via dell 'Umilta 30, 00187 Rome, Italy. Tel.: 011-39-06-6900-1821; Fax: 011-39-06-679-1448.

Papal Representatives

There are three types of representatives of the Roman Pontiff:

1) those who represent him to particular churches and civil government;

2) those who represent him to particular churches;

3) those who represent him in international organizations or at various conferences and meetings. [Cf. c. 363; CLSA Comm., p. 302]

1. Apostolic Nuncio

In the United States, the papal representative is sent by the Pope to both the local church and to the government. His title is Apostolic Nuncio.

2. Legate

An individual appointed by the Pope to be his personal representative to a nation, international conference, or local church. The legate may be chosen from the local clergy of a country.

3. Permanent Observer to the United Nations

The Apostolic See maintains permanent legates below the ambassadorial level to several world organizations. Since the papal representative does not enjoy the right to vote within the organization, his title at the United Nations is that of Observer.

Parish

A specific community of the Christian faithful within a diocese, which has its own church building, under the authority of a pastor who is responsible for providing them with ministerial service. Most parishes are formed on a geographic basis, but they may be formed along national or ethnic lines.

Parish Coordinator

A deacon, religious, or lay person who is responsible for the pastoral care of parish. The parish coordinator is in charge of the day-to-day life of the parish in the areas of worship, education, pastoral service and administration.

Pastor

A priest in charge of a parish or congregation. He is responsible for administering the sacraments, instructing the congregation in the doctrine of the Church, and other services to the people of the parish.

Pastoral Associate

A member of the laity who is part of a parish ministry team.

Pastoral Council

A consultative body which the pastor or bishop consults concerning the pastoral activity within the diocese. Its members include laity, religious, and clergy. The pastoral council's purpose is to study practical situations, difficulties and problems, and make concrete recommendations and proposals to the diocesan bishop. The pastoral council is always subject to the final authority of the pastor or bishop.

Patriarch

The Pope is the traditional "Patriarch of the West." All other bishops in the Latin Rite, even those with the honorary title of "Patriarch," are subject to him. Similarly, patriarchs within nations have only an honorary title unless special provisions are made otherwise. Eastern-rite Patriarchs are subject to the Pope while serving as heads of the faithful belonging to their rites throughout the world.

Personal Prelature

In addition to the territorial arrangement of the Church into particular or local churches or dioceses, canon law also provides for non-territorial areas of religious jurisdiction, incorporating secular clergy and deacons. Membership is also open to lay persons. These prelatures are established to meet specific pastoral or missionary needs at the regional, national, or international level without infringing on the rights of the local bishops. A prelature is presided over by a personal prelate, who is an ordinary with the right to establish seminaries and ordain priests as members of the prelature.

Canon law also allows for laity to be associated in the works of prelatures without being withdrawn from the jurisdiction of their own diocesan bishop.

Personal prelatures are jurisdictional structures of a secular type which are established by the Holy See as an instrument within the hierarchical pastoral work of the Church to carry out special pastoral or missionary tasks. Personal prelatures are based on the principle of insertion into the local Church. In this they differ essentially from the personal dioceses, such as those constituted for the faithful of a particular rite, which are based on the principle of independence or autonomy in regard to local Churches.

Vatican II provided for setting up personal prelatures (see Decree, Presbyterorum ordinis, no. 10). Additional norms were established in subsequent pontifical legislation (see Motu proprio Ecclesiae Sanctae no. 1, no. 4, August 6, 1966 and the Apostolic Constitution Regimini Ecclesiae Universae, no. 49, no. 1, Aug. 15, 1967). General legislation concerning personal prelatures is contained in canons 294 to 297 of the 1983 Code of Canon Law.

Personal prelatures are to be established by the Holy See after hearing the views of the respective Episcopal Conferences (can. 294). They are governed by a Prelate according to statutes given by the Holy See. The Prelate is their proper Ordinary, who may incardinate priests and must look after their spiritual and temporal welfare (can. 295). Lay people can dedicate themselves by means of a contractual agreement, to the apostolic activities of the prelature; the statutes are to specify the manner of this organic cooperation (can. 296). And the statutes are also to determine the relations of the prelature with the Ordinaries of the places in which the prelature works, with the prior consent of the Ordinaries (can. 297).

Presbyteral Council

Also known as the priests' council, the presbyteral council is the principal consultative body mandated by the Code of Canon Law to advise the diocesan bishop in matters of pastoral governance. It consists of bishops and priests serving the diocese.

Propagation of the Faith

An organization, headquartered in Rome, which distributes aid to Catholic missions and organizes the work of missionaries all over the world. The organization has responsibility for fostering missionary vocations, assigning missionaries to field work, defining ecclesiastical boundaries and assigning clergy to them, and encouraging training and installation of native-born clergy.

Promoter of Justice

A cleric or lay person, holding a graduate degree in canon law, who is appointed by the diocesan bishop to serve in the role of a "prosecuting attorney" in trials of crimes against church law and of other judicial litigations in the diocese. A promoter of justice may be appointed for a specific case by the bishop.

Province

A defined geographic area containing an archdiocese, or Metropolitan See, and at least one diocese, or Suffragen See. The archbishop of the archdiocese has no direct powers over the Suffragen Sees, but does have limited advisory and appellate authority and obligations. The term also refers to a territorial grouping of particular churches or communities, or a territory of a religious order.

Provincial

The superior of the communities of a religious order that constitute a province.

Provincial Council

An assembly of the bishops of an ecclesiastical province, called by the metropolitan archbishop. The term is also used in reference to the provincial superior of a province, along with his or her chief advisors.

Receptions into the Church

Can take two forms: baptism of those not previously validly baptized, or "reception into full communion" with the Church for those who have already been baptized, in which case a profession of faith affects the reception.

Religious Education Department

The ECA has established the ECDD-The Eastern Conference of Diocesan Directors of Religious Education which oversees, through God With Us Publications, all publications of catechtical materials published by it and used in Eastern Catholic Churches, mainly of Byzantine tradition.

Religious Priest/Diocesan Priest

Religious, or regular, priests are those who are professed members of a religious order or institute. Religious clergy live according to the rule of their respective orders. In pastoral ministry, they are under the jurisdiction of their local bishop, as well as the superiors of their order. Diocesan, or secular, priests are under the direction of their local bishop. They commit to serving their congregations and other institutions.

Retreat

A period of time spent in meditation and religious exercise. Retreats may take various forms, from traditional closed forms, to open retreats, which do not disengage the participants from day-to-day life. Both clergy and lay people of all ages participate in retreats. Houses and centers providing facilities for retreats are retreat houses.

Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults [RCIA]

The liturgical book containing the norms and rituals of the Catholic Church for people who wish to join the Church. Part of the book is intended for baptized Christians who wish to become Catholics. The term is used in a general sense to refer to the process of entering the Catholic Church.

Roman Curia

The official collective name for the administrative agencies and courts, and their officials, who assist the Pope in governing the Church. Members are appointed and granted authority by the Pope.

St. Vincent DePaul Society

Originally known as the Conference of Charity, this is an organization of lay people who serve the poor through spiritual and material works of mercy. The society operates stores, rehabilitation workshops, food centers, shelters, criminal justice and other programs.

Scholastic

A member of a religious order who has completed his novitiate, but has not yet been ordained.

Scholastic Teaching

Usually refers to Scholastic Philosophy, which is the basis for much Catholic Theology. It comes from the canonical "schools" of the 12th-13th centuries, St. Thomas Aquinas, St. Bonaventure, St. Albert the Great, etc., who developed "scholasticism" based mainly on Aristotle. It is the semi-official philosophy of the Church.

Secular Institute

Canonically erected institute of consecrated life for single laity and clerics who strive for the perfection of charity and work for the sanctification of the world while remaining in a lifestyle within the world.

See

The word is taken from the Latin word "sedes" ("seat"), and is used to denote a diocese or ecclesiastical district. The term Holy See is reserved to the diocese of Rome whose bishop is the Pope. U.S. Territorial Sees are dioceses located on territory of the United States of America, but are members of episcopal conferences other than the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Seminary

An educational institution for men preparing for Holy Orders. The term originates from the time of St. Augustine, when those preparing for the priesthood were educated in the "cathedral school." During the Middle Ages, the clergy were educated in a university setting where faculties of philosophy, theology, and canon law existed. Eventually individual dioceses or provinces came to establish their own schools for educating their clerical students. Traditional seminaries date from the Council of Trent in the 16th century.

A school for the spiritual, academic, and pastoral education and formation of priesthood candidates is known as a major seminary in which the focus is on philosophical and theological education. To prepare for entrance into a major seminary, a period of study is set aside for the required courses in the humanities and the sciences in institutions called minor seminaries.

Serra Club

Local units of Serra International, an organization which promotes vocations to the priesthood and religious life, and offers instruction to lay leaders.

Sister

The term, in the strictest sense, refers to women religious who belong to institutes which have professed simple vows. However, in everyday usage, the term is used for any woman religious.

Sodality

A group of laity established for the promotion of Christian life and worship, or some other religious purpose.

Special Centers for Social Services

This would seem to overlap with Specialized Homes. Some of the categorization is fairly arbitrary. Catholic Charities might have its own proper distinctions for government or private funding purposes.

Specialized Homes

Includes such institutions as homes for handicapped (e.g., Misericordia Homes), youth homes (e.g., Maryville, Mercy Boys and Girls, Homes), homes for battered women, drug rehab centers, homes for unwed mothers, etc.

Superior

The head of a religious order or congregation. He or she may be the head of a province, or an individual house.

Synod

A gathering of designated officials and representatives of a church, that has legislative and policy-making powers.

1. Synod of Bishops

The Synod of Bishops is a consultative body, unless explicitly stated otherwise by His Holiness, expressing the communion of the hierarchy. A synod of bishops meets in general assembly, either in "Ordinary" or "Extraordinary" session, when the matter for treatment concerns the whole Church and in "Special Assembly" when the matter deals directly with a definite region or regions.

2. Synod of Oriental Churches

The synods of the Oriental Churches enjoy various prerogatives including the right to elect bishops, regulate discipline and exercise pastoral authority in their respective churches.

3. Diocesan Synod

A diocesan synod is an expression of the communion of the particular church. A diocesan synod enjoys the participation of priests, women and men religious and laypersons; the bishop is the sole legislator.

Territorial Sees

Dioceses located on territory of the United States, but are members of episcopal conferences other than the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Theologate

An institution which provides the last four years of study for candidates for the priesthood.

Titular See

A former diocese which no longer physically or geographically exists. Titular Sees are given as an honorary title to certain bishop not serving as a chief pastor of a diocese, i.e., auxiliary bishops, papal representatives, and bishops of the Roman Curia.

Tribunal

A tribunal (court) is the name given to the person or persons who exercise the Church's judicial powers. By its very nature, this procedure involves the determination of a legal controversy. A major concern of tribunals is conducting the process leading to the dissolution or annulment of marriages. In ecclesiastical matters, definite procedural norms for conducting a trial are found in the Code of Canon Law to settle disputes. There are various grades of tribunals, including diocesan tribunals, the first court of trial for most cases; regional and metropolitan tribunals, located in an archdiocese, the appellate court for all cases tried within the province; and the tribunals of the Holy See, which act as the Church's central appellate court, try cases reserved to the Holy See, deal with questions of procedure and jurisdiction of the other courts, and act as the Church's supreme court.

United States Conference of Catholic Bishops

The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops is a permanent institute composed of Catholic bishops of the United States of America in and through which the bishops exercise in a communal or collegial manner the pastoral mission entrusted to them by the Lord Jesus of sanctification, teaching, and leadership, especially by devising forms and methods of the apostolate suitably adapted to the circumstances of the times. Such exercise is intended to offer appropriate assistance to each bishop in fulfilling his particular ministry in the local Church, to effect a commonality of ministry addressed to the people of the United States of America, and to foster and express communion with the Church in other nations within the Church universal, under the leadership of its chief pastor, The Pope.

Vicar

The appointment of a priest or a bishop as an episcopal vicar is an option given to a diocesan bishop when he needs a deputy for governing a specific territory within the diocese, a group of persons or a specific rite, or a type of apostolic work within the diocese.

By Church law, the diocesan bishop is the judge of all cases in the diocesan tribunal of first trial. He must appoint a priest with ordinary power to judge cases not reserved to the bishop himself. This priest must have a graduate degree in canon law. He is called the judicial vicar, and is sometimes referred to as the chief judge or officialis. He may be given another priest as an assistant with the title of adjutant judicial vicar.

A bishop or priest appointed to participate in the executive (administrative) governance of the diocese with executive jurisdiction as a deputy of the diocesan bishop is a vicar general. The appointment of a vicar general is mandatory for every diocese. This office is designed to facilitate and unify diocesan administration.

Vicar for Religious

A priest appointed by a bishop to act as his representative in dealing with the religious communities in his diocese.

PART I

Hierarchy of the Catholic Church

The Hierarchy, as the supreme governing body of the Catholic Church, consists of the Roman Pontiff, the successor of Peter, and the Bishops joined together with him and never without him (canons 330,331,336) in one apostolic college to provide for the common good of the Church. The Roman Pontiff in the exercise of his office is assisted by the College of Cardinals, and further by the departments also called "dicasteries" of the Roman Curia. The Bishops, of whom some bear the titles of Patriarch and Archbishop, are united with the Roman Pontiff in the governance of the whole Church; the Bishops, when assigned to particular Sees, are individually responsible for the teaching, sanctification and governance of their particular Church. Apostolic Vicars and Prefects together with certain Abbots and other Prelates are also joined in this work.

HIS HOLINESS THE POPE

Bishop of Rome and Vicar of Jesus Christ,
Successor of St. Peter, Prince of the Apostles,
Supreme Pontiff of the Universal Church.
Primate of Italy.
Archbishop and Metropolitan of the Roman Province,
Sovereign of Vatican City State.
Servant of the Servants of God

Francis

JORGE MARIO BERGOGLIO, S.J.

The present successor of St. Peter was born in Buenos Aires on December 17, 1936; ordained for the Jesuits on December 13, 1969; appointed Auxiliary Bishop of Buenos Aires on May 20, 1992, receiving Episcopal consecration on June 27, 1992; appointed Coadjutor Archbishop of Buenos Aires on June 3, 1997 and succeeded Cardinal Antonio Quarracino on February 28, 1998; Created and proclaimed Cardinal by the Blessed John Paul II in the consistory of February 21, 2001. Elected Pope, March 13, 2013; installed March 19, 2013.

VATICAN CITY

Vatican City is the smallest state in the world, occupying 108.7 acres, of which about one third is covered with buildings and is situated on the right side of the Tiber River. Vatican City has territory, population, and sovereignty. This territory, limited as it is, suffices to guarantee the spiritual and temporal independence needed for the exercise of the Holy See's spiritual mission. In 1870 the Kingdom of Italy seized all Vatican possessions which for several centuries had constituted the papal temporal domain. But even after 1870 the Holy See continued to regard itself as a separate entity in international law, and was recognized as such by numerous states with which it retained normal diplomatic relations. After long discussions the Holy See and the then Kingdom of Italy signed the Lateran Pacts on February 11, 1929, so that the complete and independent authority of the Vatican State was and is recognized by the Italian state.

The Sovereign of this small state is His Holiness, the Pope.

The government presently is administered by a Pontifical Commission of which His Eminence Giuseppe Cardinal Bertello is President.

THE COLLEGE OF CARDINALS

The Cardinals constitute a special college and they assist the Roman Pontiff collegially when they are called together to deal with questions of major importance; they do so individually when they assist the Pope especially in the daily care of the universal Church by means of the different offices which they perform (canons 349-350). The Cardinals who are under eighty years of age elect his successor.

The College of Cardinals is divided into three ranks: Cardinal-Bishops, Cardinal-Priests, and Cardinal-Deacons. The College of Cardinals, when complete formerly consisted of 70 members: 6 Cardinal Bishops, 50 Cardinal Priests and 14 Cardinal Deacons, but the late Pontiffs, Pope John XXIII and Pope Paul VI enlarged the College of Cardinals. At the moment the maximum number of Cardinal electors (those under 80 years of age) must not exceed 120.

The Cardinal Bishops (except the Patriarch-Cardinals of the Oriental Rites), have as Titular Sees the Suburban Sees of Rome, which are: Porto Santa Rufina, Albano, Palestrina, Sabina, Frascati, Velletri, Segni. The Cardinal Dean has united to his See the See of Ostia. The Cardinal Priests take their title from the Titular Churches to which they are appointed: the Cardinal Deacons are appointed to other Churches called Deaconries. The first Cardinal Bishop is Dean; the first Cardinal Priest is First Priest; and the first Cardinal Deacon is First Deacon of the Sacred College. The Dean has the right of ordaining the new Pope if he is not already a bishop; the First Deacon has the right of proclaiming him and investing him with the sacred Pallium. On the death of the Pontiff, the Cardinal Camerlengo has the Administration of the affairs of the Holy See.

Sometimes the Roman Pontiff promotes a person to the dignity of Cardinal but does not make public his name and keeps it in pectore. Upon the publication of his name, this Cardinal enjoys his right of precedence from the day on which his name was reserved in pectore by the Pope (cfr. Can. 351¶ 3).

The Roman Curia

The present norms regarding the Roman Curia were publicly announced June 28, 1988, in the Pastor Bonus - Constitutio Apostolica de Romana Curia, and published in A.A.S. LXXX/1988, Commentarium Officiale, pp. 841-934. The Supreme Pontiff usually conducts business of the universal Church by means of the Roman Curia, which fulfills its duty in his name and by his authority for the good and the service of the Churches; it consists of the Secretariat of State or the Papal Secretariat, congregations, tribunals and other institutions, whose structure and competency are defined in special law (can. 360). The Roman curia is the complex of departments and institutes which assist the Roman Pontiff in the exercise of his supreme pastoral function for the good and service of the universal Church and of the particular churches, by which the unity of faith and communion of the people of God is strengthened and the mission is promoted which is proper to the Church in the world.

I. SECRETARIAT OF STATE

The Secretariat of State

The Secretariat of State is the dicastery of the Roman Curia which works most closely with the Supreme Pontiff in the exercise of his universal mission (Pastor Bonus, Art. 39). The Secretariat of State is presided over by a Cardinal who assumes the title of Secretary of State. As the Pope's first Collaborator in the governance of the universal Church, the Cardinal Secretary of State is the one primarily responsible for the diplomatic and political activity of the Holy See, in some circumstances representing the person of the Supreme Pontiff himself.

The Secretariat of State includes two sections, namely: the First Section that is headed by an Archbishop, the Substitute for General Affairs, assisted by a Prelate, the Assessor for General Affairs; and the Second Section of the Secretariat of State headed by an Archbishop, the Secretary for Relations with States, aided by a Prelate, the Under-Secretary for Relations with States, and assisted by Cardinals and Bishops.

Secretary of State: His Eminence Tarcisio Cardinal Bertone.
Office: Apostolic Palace, 00120 Vatican City State, Europe. Tel: 06-69.88.39.13; Fax: 06-69.88.52.55.

First Section: For General Affairs

In conformity with Arts. 41-44 of Pastor Bonus, the Section for General Affairs or the First Section is responsible for handling matters regarding the everyday service of the Supreme Pontiff, both in caring for the universal Church and in dealing with the dicasteries of the Roman Curia. It attends to the preparation of whatever documents the Holy Father entrusts to it. It enacts the provisions for appointments within the Roman Curia and keeps custody of the Lead Seal and the Fisherman's Ring. It regulates the duties and activity of the Holy See's Representatives, especially in relation to the local Churches. It attends to all that concerns the Embassies accredited to the Holy See. It supervises the Holy See's official communication agencies and is responsible for publishing the "Acta Apostolicae Sedis" and the "Annuario Pontificio".

Substitute: Most Rev. Archbishop Giovanni Angelo Becciu.
Assessor: Rev. Msgr. Peter Bryan Wells.
Office: Apostolic Palace, 00120 Vatican City State, Europe. Tel: 06.69.88.34.38; Fax: 06.69.88.52.41; E-mail: sostituto@sds.va.

Second Section: For Relations with States

On the basis of Arts. 45-47 of Pastor Bonus, the Section for Relations with States or Second Section has the specific duty of attending to matters which involve civil governments. It has responsibility for the Holy See's diplomatic relations with States, including the establishing of Concordats or similar agreements; for the Holy See's presence in international organizations and conferences; in special circumstances, by order of the Supreme Pontiff and in consultation with the competent dicasteries of the Curia, provides for appointments to particular Churches, and for their establishment or modification; in close collaboration with the Congregation for Bishops, it attends to the appointment of Bishops in countries which have entered into treaties or agreements with the Holy See in accordance with the norms of international law.

Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Dominique Mamberti.
Undersecretary: Rev. Msgr. Antoine Camilleri.
Office: Apostolic Palace, 00120 Vatican City State, Europe. Tel: 06.69.88.30.14; Fax: 06.69.88.53.64; E-mail: rapportistati@sds.va.

II. CONGREGATIONS

By the name of department (dicasteria) is understood: the congregations, tribunals, councils and offices, namely the Apostolic Camera, the Administration of the Patrimony of the Apostolic See, and the Prefecture of Economic Affairs of the Holy See. The departments are juridically equal among themselves. Attached to the institutes of the Roman Curia are the Prefecture of the Papal Household and the Office of Liturgical Celebrations of the Supreme Pontiff.

The Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith

The proper function of the Congregation on the Doctrine of the Faith is to promote and safeguard the doctrine of faith and morals in the whole Catholic world; therefore, those things belong to it which touch this matter in any way. Fulfilling the function of promoting doctrine, it fosters studies in order that the understanding of the faith might grow and that a response can be prepared under the light of faith for new questions arising from developments in science and human culture. It is a help to bishops, whether individually or gathered in assemblies, in the exercise of the function by which they are constituted authentic teachers and doctors of the faith as well as the office by which they are held to safeguard and promote the integrity of that faith. This Sacred Congregation reproves doctrines opposed to the principles of the faith after the interested Bishops of a region have been heard. It studies the books referred to it and, if necessary, reproves them after the author has been heard and has had an opportunity to defend himself and after the Ordinary has been forewarned. It also examines whatever concerns "the privilege of the faith" whether in law and in fact. It is competent to pass judgment on errors about the faith according to the norms of an ordinary process. It safeguards the dignity of the sacrament of Penance. The Congregation proceeds administratively or judicially according to the nature of the question to be treated.

Prefect: Most Rev. Archbishop Gerhard Ludwig Müller.
Secretary: Most Rev. Luis Francisco Ladaria Ferrer, S.J.
Undersecretary: Rev. Msgr. Damiano Marzotto Caotorta.
Office: Piazza del S. Uffizio 11, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.89.59.11; Fax: 06.69.88.34.09.

The Congregation for the Oriental Churches

This Congregation considers those matters, whether regarding persons or things, which touch on the Eastern Catholic Churches. It treats all questions which pertain either to persons, or to discipline, or to the rites of the Oriental Churches, even if they are mixed in that by the nature of the thing or of persons they involve Latins. Territories in which a major part of the Christians belong to Oriental rites are subject only to this Congregation. Even in Latin territories it carefully supervises the faithful of Oriental rites and provides as much as possible for their spiritual needs even by the establishment of their own hierarchy if the number of faithful and circumstances require this.

Prefect: His Eminence Leonardo Cardinal Sandri.
Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Cyril Vasil, S.J.
Undersecretary: Rev. Msgr. Maurizio Malvestiti.
Office: Via della Conciliazione 34, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.42.81; E-mail: cco@orientchurch.va.

The Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments

This congregation does those things which pertain to the Apostolic See as to the moderation and promotion of the sacred liturgy, especially the sacraments, with due regard for the competence of the Congregation on Doctrine of the Faith. It fosters and safeguards the discipline of the sacraments, especially what pertains to their valid and licit celebration; moreover, it concedes favors and dispensations for matters which are not contained in the facilities of diocesan bishops in this line. It alone examines the non-consummation of a marriage and the presence of causes for the granting of a dispensation and everything connected with them. It has competence with regard to the obligations connected with major orders and it examines questions about the validity of sacred ordination.

Prefect: His Eminence Antonio Cardinal Canizares Llovera.
Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Arthur Roche.
Undersecretaries: Rev. Msgr. Juan Miguel Ferrer Grenesche; Very Rev. Anthony Ward, S.M.
Office: Piazza Pio XII 10, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.40.05; Fax: 06.69.88.34.99; E-mail: cultdiv@ccdds.va.

The Congregation for the Causes of Saints

The Congregation for the Causes of Saints is competent in all matters which in any way pertain to the Beatification of Servants of God or to the Canonization of the Blessed or to the Preservation of Relics.

This Congregation is divided into three offices.

Prefect: His Eminence Angelo Cardinal Amato, S.D.B.
Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Marcello Bartolucci.
Undersecretary: Very Rev. Boguslaw Turek, C.S.M.A.
Office: Piazza Pio XII 10, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.42.47; Fax: 06.69.88.19.35.

The Congregation for Bishops

This congregation examines what pertains to the constitution and provision of particular churches as well as the exercise of the Episcopal function in the Latin Church, except for the competence of the Congregation for the Evangelization of Peoples. It belongs to the Congregation for Bishops to propose to the Roman Pontiff, for approval, the constitution of new dioceses, provinces and regions; to divide, unite and realign them after consulting the interested Episcopal Conferences; it deals also with the erection of the military ordinariates and, after consulting the Episcopal Conference, prelacies for special pastoral ministries for various regions or social groups. This Congregation provides also for the naming of bishops, apostolic administrators, coadjutors and auxiliaries of bishops, military and other vicars and prelates enjoying personal jurisdiction. It is competent for all things that have to do with bishops and publishes norms which, through the Episcopal Conference, provide for the more urgent needs of the faithful.

Prefect: His Eminence Marc Cardinal Ouellet
Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Lorenzo Baldisseri.
Undersecretary: Rev. Msgr. Udo Breitbach.

Office: Piazza Pio XII 10, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.42.17; Fax: 06.69.88.53.03.

Pontifical Commission for Latin America

(Directly responsible to Congregation for Bishops)
President: His Eminence Marc Cardinal Ouellet.
Secretary: Prof. Guzman Carriquiry

The Congregation for the Evangelization of Peoples or for the Propagation of the Faith

It belongs to this congregation to direct and coordinate throughout the world the work of the evangelization of peoples itself and missionary cooperation, while respecting the competence of the Congregation for Eastern Churches. It is competent for those things which pertain to all the missions established for the spread of the Kingdom of Christ throughout the world and therefore for whatever is connected with the assignment and transferal of the necessary ministers, for describing ecclesiastical boundaries and proposing those who will govern them. It encourages also the development of an indigenous clergy. The congregation sponsors missionary initiatives and promotes missionary vocations and spirituality. In the territories subject to it, the Congregation has charge of all that pertains to the holding of synods and councils, to the establishing of episcopal conferences and to the review of their statutes and decrees. The Congregation has a Supreme Council for the direction of Pontifical Missionary Works, on which depend the general Councils of the Missionary Union of the Clergy, the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, the Society of St. Peter the Apostle, and the Society of the Holy Childhood.

Prefect: His Eminence Fernando Cardinal Filoni.
Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Savio Hon Tai-Fai, S.D.B.
Adjunct Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Protase Rugambwa.
Undersecretary: Very Rev. Tadeusz Wojda, S.A.C.
Office: Palazzo di Propaganda Fide, Piazza di Spagna 48, 00187 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.87.92.99; Fax: 06.69.88.01.18; E-mail: segreteria@propagandafide.va.

The Congregation for the Clergy

With due regard for the rights of bishops and their conferences, this congregation examines those things which concern priests and deacons of the secular clergy with regard to their persons, pastoral ministry, matters which are in support of the exercise of these things, and in all this provides opportune assistance to the bishops. The Congregation gives practical expression to the concern of the Apostolic See for the formation of those called to Holy Order. It ensures that seminaries be established and directed in accordance with law and provided with a sound human, spiritual, doctrinal and pastoral formation.

The Congregation is competent concerning the life, conduct, rights, and obligations of clergy. It advises on a more suitable distribution of priests and fosters the ongoing education of clergy, especially concerning their sanctification and the effective exercise of their pastoral ministry.

The Congregation looks also to the preservation and administration of the temporal goods of the Church without prejudice to the other Congregations which have temporal goods committed to their vigilance.

Prefect: His Eminence Mauro Cardinal Piacenza.
Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Celso Morga Iruzubieta.
Undersecretary: Rev. Msgr. Antonio Neri.
Office: Piazza Pio XII 3, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.41.51; Fax: 06.69.88.48.45; E-mail: clero@cclergy.va.

The Congregation for Institutes of Consecrated Life and for Societies of Apostolic Life

The principal function of this congregation is to promote and supervise, in the whole Latin Church, the practices of the evangelical counsels as they are exercised in approved forms of consecrated life and at the same time the activities of societies of apostolic life. The Congregation takes care of Religious Institutes of Consecrated Life and Secular Institutes.

Religious Institutes: the Congregation is entrusted with the affairs of all religious institutes of the Latin Rite and their members. It is also competent in matters which pertain to societies of common life, whose members live like religious, or to Third Orders as such.

Secular Institutes: the Congregation is competent in the same way, all else being equal, for Apostolic Societies which, although not religious, make a true and complete profession of the evangelical counsels in the world.

Prefect: His Eminence João Cardinal Braz de Aviz.
Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Jose Rodriguez Carballo, O.F.M.
Undersecretaries: Rev. Sebastiano Paciolla, O.Cist.
Office: Piazza Pio XII 3, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.89.25.11; Fax: 06.69.88.45.26.

The Congregation for Catholic Education

This Congregation gives practical expression to the concern of the Apostolic See for the promotion and organization of Catholic education.

The Congregation oversees universities, faculties and any institute of higher learning which has the name "Catholic" in so far as they depend on the authority of the Church, not excluding those directed by religious or the laity.

The Congregation cares for the establishment of parochial and diocesan schools; watches over all Catholic schools below the level of a university and faculty, as well as all institutes of instruction or education dependent on the authority of the Church.

Prefect: His Eminence Zenon Cardinal Grocholewski.
Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Angelo Vincenzo Zani.
Office: Piazza Pio XII 3, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.41.67; Fax: 06.69.88.41.72.

III. TRIBUNALS

Apostolic Penitentiary

The competence of this Tribunal is concerned with those matters which pertain to the internal forum, for both the sacramental and non-sacramental internal forum. It is competent in matters pertaining to the granting and use of indulgences.

Major Penitentiary: His Eminence Manuel Cardinal Monteiro de Castro.
Office: Piazza della Cancelleria 1, 00186 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.75.26; Fax: 06.69.8875.57.

Supreme Tribunal of the Apostolic Signatura

This department, in addition to the function which it exercises as Supreme Tribunal, consults that justice may be correctly administered in the Church.

With the many functions, the Apostolic Signatura judges the matters assigned to it in the Code of Canon Law; it prorogues the competence of tribunals; it extends the forum for strangers in Rome to cases of matrimonial nullity in extraordinary circumstances and for grave reasons; it supervises the proper administration of justice; it provides for the establishment of regional and interregional tribunals; it enjoys the rights assigned to it in concordats between the Holy See and the various nations.

The Tribunal settles questions about the exercise of administrative ecclesiastical power which are referred to it. It also passes on conflicts of competence among the departments of the Holy See; it examines administrative matters referred to it by the Congregations of the Roman Curia as well as questions committed to it by the Holy Father.

Prefect: His EminenceRaymond Leo Cardinal Burke.
Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Frans Daneels, O.Praem.
Office: Piazza della Cancelleria 1, 00186 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.75.20; Fax: 06.69.88.75.53.

Tribunal of the Roman Rota

This tribunal acts as a higher instance at the Apostolic See, usually in the grade of appeal, for safeguarding rights in the Church; it fosters the unity of jurisprudence and, through its own sentences, is a help to lower tribunals. It is also a court of first instance for cases specified in the law and for others committed to the Rota by the Roman Pontiff. The greater part of its decisions concern the nullity of marriage. In such cases its competence includes marriages between two Catholics, between a Catholic and non-Catholic, and between two non-Catholic parties whether one or both of the baptized parties belongs to a Latin or Oriental Rite.

Dean: Most Rev. Bishop Pio Vito Pinto.
Office: Piazza della Cancelleria 1, 00186 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.75.02; Fax: 06.69.88.75.54.

IV. PONTIFICAL COUNCILS

Pontifical Council for the Laity

This council is competent in those matters which pertain to the Apostolic See in promoting and coordinating the apostolate of the lay persons and, generally, in those things which look to the Christian life of lay persons as such. The norms were published in the apostolic letter, Catholicam Christi Ecclesiam of January 6, 1967 (A.A.S., LIX, pp. 25-28).

President: His Eminence Stanislaw Cardinal Rylko.
Secretary: Most Rev. Bishop Josef Clemens.
Undersecretary: Rev. Msgr. Miguel Delgado Galindo.

The Catholic Church in the United States

The organizational structure of the Catholic Church in the United States consists of 33 Provinces with as many Archdioceses (Metropolitan Sees); 149 Suffragan Sees (Dioceses); The Military Archdiocese; four Eastern-Rite jurisdictions immediately subject to the Holy See in Rome. The Eparchies of St. Maron (Maronites), Newton (Melkites), St. Thomas the Apostle of Detroit (Chaldeans) and St. George Martyr of Canton, Ohio (Romanians), St. Thomas of Chicago of the Syro-Malabarians. Each of these jurisdictions is under the direction of an Archbishop and Bishop called an Ordinary, who has apostolic responsibility and authority for the pastoral service of the people in his care.

The structure includes the territorial episcopal conference known as the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops. In and through this body, which is strictly ecclesiastical and has defined juridical authority, the Bishops exercise their collegiate pastorate over the Church in the entire country.

Related to the USCCB is the civil corporation and operational secretariat through which the Bishops, in cooperation with other members of the Church, act on a wider-than-ecclesiastical scale for the good of the Church and society in the United States.

The following is a list of the thirteen regions in the United States and provinces within those regions.

Region I: Includes the states of Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. Provinces of Boston and Hartford; Eparchy of Stamford and Eparchy for Melkites.

Region II: Includes the state of New York. Province of New York and Eparchy of St. Maron; Syro-Malankara Catholic Exarchate in USA.

Region III: Includes the states of New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Provinces of Newark and Philadelphia; Archeparchy of Philadelphia, Ukrainian Archeparchy of Pittsburgh, Byzantine Eparchy of Passaic, and Eparchy of Our Lady of Nareg for Armenian Catholics.

Region IV: Includes the states of Delaware, District of Columbia, Maryland, Virgin Islands, Virginia and West Virginia. Provinces of Baltimore, Washington, and the Military Archdiocese.

Region V: Includes the states of Alabama, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee. Provinces of Louisville, Mobile and New Orleans.

Region VI: Includes the states of Michigan and Ohio. Provinces of Cincinnati, Detroit; Eparchy of Parma, Apostolic Exarchate for Chaldeans, and Apostolic Exarchate for Romanians.

Region VII: Includes the states of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin. Provinces of Chicago, Indianapolis, Milwaukee; Eparchy of St. Nicholas in Chicago-Ukrainian.

Region VIII: Includes the states of Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota. Provinces of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Region IX: Includes the states of Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska. Provinces of Dubuque, Kansas City in Kansas, Omaha and St. Louis.

United States Conference of Catholic Bishops

Address—3211 Fourth St., N.E., Washington, DC 20017-1194. Tel: 202-541-3000; Web Site: www.usccb.org.

The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops is a permanent institute composed of Catholic bishops of the United States of America in and through which the bishops exercise in a communal or collegial manner the pastoral mission entrusted to them by the Lord Jesus of sanctification, teaching, and leadership, especially by devising forms and methods of the apostolate suitably adapted to the circumstances of the times. Such exercise is intended to offer appropriate assistance to each bishop in fulfilling his particular ministry in the local Church, to effect a commonality of ministry addressed to the people of the United States of America, and to foster and express communion with the Church in other nations within the Church universal, under the leadership of its chief pastor, the Pope.

CRS World Headquarters, 228 W. Lexington St. Baltimore, MD 21201-3413. Tel: 866-608-5978 Web: www.crs.org Dr. Carolyn Y. Woo, Pres.

Catholic Relief Services is the official international humanitarian agency of the Catholic community in the United States. CRS alleviates suffering and provides assistance to people in need in nearly 100 countries, without regard to race, religion or nationality.

CRS was founded in 1943 by the bishops of the United States to assist the poor and disadvantaged outside this country — helping people in need for more than 65 years.

CRS is efficient and effective directing more than 94 percent of the agency's expenditures directly to programs that benefit the poor overseas. Our agency touches more than 100 million lives, by addressing the root causes and effects of poverty, promoting human dignity, and helping to build more just and peaceful societies.

Our relief and development work is accomplished through programs of emergency response, HIV, health, agriculture, education, microfinance and peacebuilding.

We serve Catholics in the United States by inviting them to live out their faith as part of one human family.

Catholic Charities USA is a national network of more than 1,700 local Catholic Charities agencies and institutions that provide help and create hope for more than 10.2 million people a year regardless of their religious, social, or economic backgrounds.

For more than 280 years, local Catholic Charities agencies have been providing a wide range of vital services in their communities ranging from day care, adoption, and refugee resettlement to advocacy, counseling, and emergency food and housing. Today, the Catholic Charities network is made up of more than 62,000 staff and 243,000 volunteers. In addition, more than 6,100 individuals serve as volunteer members of local boards.

The National Office-Catholic Charities USA-was founded in 1910 as the National Conference of Catholic Charities by the Most Rev. Thomas J. Shahan and Rt. Rev. Msgr. William J. Kerby in cooperation with lay leaders of the Society of St. Vincent De Paul.

Catholic Charities USA provides its members a national voice, networking opportunities, training and technical assistance, program development, and financial support.

Catholic Charities USA has been commissioned by the U.S. Catholic bishops to represent the Catholic community in times of domestic disaster. Catholic Charities USA also provides disaster preparedness training to dioceses and agencies to mitigate the disruption of business and services consequent to natural disasters.

Pope Benedict XVI has named Fr. Larry Synder, President of Catholic Charities USA, to the Dicastery of Cor Unum, which oversees the church's charitable activities.

Publications: Charities USA, a quarterly membership magazine; an annual report; an annual survey of Catholic Charities services nationwide; and various publications on issues of concern to Catholic Charities agencies.

Catholic Volunteer Network promotes, recruits and refers volunteers to missions in the United States and overseas. We represent more than 200 faith-based volunteer programs worldwide and work with the U.S. dioceses, religious communities and the private sector to determine their needs for help. Catholic Volunteer Network (CVN) is committed to the goal that every Catholic man and woman be invited to consider a period of service in the missions, as a vital and important manifestation of the baptismal call of all Catholic people. Currently over 19,000 men and women are serving in CVN member mission programs offering their gifts and abilities in full-time service to people in need and living their Catholic faith more fully. These volunteers are serving domestically for a summer, six months, a year or more, and they are serving internationally for two or more years at a time. They are single and married, recent college graduates and early retirees, doctors and teachers, parish ministers and social workers, community organizers, computer programmers, legal aides and more. Gatherings: Annual Conference; Formation Workshop, Training Seminars.

Publications: annual, Response: Directory of Volunteer Opportunities; monthly, How Can I Help?; quarterly, FaithWorks.

Awards: The Father George Mader Award, given annually to honor organizations and individuals who promote the value of lay mission service. The Bishop Joseph A. Francis Award to honor organizations and individuals who promote community service.

Through its annual conference, Stewardship and Development Institutes, publications and audio materials, ICSC allows people committed to Christian stewardship to gather, share ideas, and learn from each other. At one with the universal church, ICSC fosters solidarity of stewardship as a way of life in parishes and dioceses all over the world. Membership in ICSC is extended to several categories of Christian stewards: (Arch)dioceses, parishes, Catholic associations and professional firms from the United States and around the world. Members receive a number of essential benefits to enable them to live stewardship and bring this way of life to others in their communities and organizations.

ICSC encourages the growing professionalism of diocesan stewardship and development procedures and programs, as well as the development of parish-centered stewardship renewal aimed at increasing the time, talent and treasure contributed by parishioners. These principles of stewardship outlined in the 1992 USCCB Pastoral Letter: Stewardship: A Disciple's Response.

The National Association of Pastoral Musicians fosters the art of musical liturgy. The members of NPM serve the Catholic Church in the United States as musicians, clergy, liturgists, and other leaders of prayer. Regular parish membership includes both parish musicians and parish clergy. Individual membership is also available.

NPM programs include an annual national convention for musicians, clergy, and other leaders, as well as institutes for cantors, choir directors, guitarists, and ensemble musicians in addition to programs in pastoral liturgy, chant, music with children, and handbells. Several webinars are held each year on topics of interest and concern to musicians and other liturgical leaders. NPM provides a Job Hotline to assist musicians seeking employment and parishes searching for musicians. The Association also sponsors certification programs for organists, cantors, and professional directors of music ministries.

The Association is directed by a 5-member Board of Directors, advised by a 40-member NPM Council and served by a 9-person staff. There is a division for professional directors of music ministries as well as special interest sections for cantors, choir directors, organists, clergy, ensemble musicians, pianists, composers, diocesan directors of music, music educators, military musicians, campus ministers, youth, pastoral liturgy, chant, and musicians serving African American parishes, Hispanic communities, Asian Pacific communities, and religious congregations.

Publications include Pastoral Music (five times annually); Pastoral Music Notebook (twice monthly by e-mail); Sunday Word for Pastoral Musicians (weekly by e-mail); The Liturgical Singer (four times annually); as well as e-newsletters for clergy and professional directors of music ministries. The NPM website provides a wealth of free resources, including music planning suggestions, access to official church documents, and downloadable recordings of chants for the Mass.

The mission of the National Catholic Conference for Total Stewardship (NCCTS) is to initiate in dioceses and parishes the concept of total stewardship through a pastoral process called Celebrating Life as a Catholic Christian (CLCC). The concept joins the three basic elements of the bible: Evangelization, Discipleship and Service, and through the CLCC process presents them as a single unit not as separate apostolates. The CLCC manual defines the 3 elements, choosing key paragraphs and explanatory excerpts from 20 modern day papal documents. The process first updates active church-going Catholics in sound catechesis and eucharistic spirituality. At the same time the process prepares and motivates them to reach out to lapsed, non-regular church-going Catholics making person-to-person contact with them and with RCIA graduates. They join a Small Ecclesial Faith Community (SEFC) connected to the parish. Active parishoners in SEFCs constitute a welcoming environment for those in need of returning to the faith and those in need of retaining it. In them they experience Catholic fellowship, inter-personal sharing, communal and personal prayer and study official church teachings. Through the CLCC process returnees and recent converts are further formed in doctrine and spirituality for active membership in the Church, for encountering Christ in the sacraments, for enjoying "communion" with all Catholics and for Celebrating Life as Catholic Christians both in vocation and mission.

The National Association for Lay Ministry (NALM) is a professional organization which supports, educates and advocates for lay ministers. The organization also promotes the development of lay ministry in the Catholic Church and provides a national voice for Catholic lay ministry. NALM's membership is drawn from the more than 40,000 lay ecclesial ministers who devote their lives to the Church by working in parishes and dioceses. Other members are students preparing for ministry. Still others live out their baptismal call as generous volunteers to the church. NALM has a long tradition of support from bishops, priests, deacons, publishers and academic institutions. Each, in its own way, collaborates with NALM to promote the empowerment of the laity in the Catholic Church.

NALM recently led the Emerging Models of Pastoral Leadership project. This project was one of the largest research efforts to examine the changing nature of parish life in the United States. In addition, NALM and its partners in the Alliance for the Certification of Lay Ecclesial Ministers, have promulgated and published National Certification Standards for Lay Ecclesial Ministers. In 2012, the Alliance implemented a national certification process for lay ecclesial ministers.

Square Miles 4,801.

Established a Diocese November 6, 1789; Established an Archdiocese April 8, 1808.

Comprises the City of Baltimore and Allegany, Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Carroll, Frederick, Garrett, Harford, Howard and Washington Counties.

By a Decree of the Sacred Congregation of the Propaganda, July 19, 1858, approved by His Holiness, Pius IX, July 25, 1858, "Prerogative of Place" was conferred on the Archdiocese of Baltimore. By the explicit words of said decree of the Holy See, the Archbishop of Baltimore takes precedence over all Archbishops of the United States (not Cardinals) in Councils, gatherings and meetings of whatever kind of the Hierarchy (in concillis, coetibus et comitiis quibuscumque) regardless of the seniority of other Archbishops in promotion or ordination. Decree signed by Cardinal Barnabo, August 15, 1858.

For legal titles of parishes and archdiocesan institutions, consult the Chancery Office.
